Maryland Young Couple To Prove You Can Make It Farming

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

RISING SUN, Md. — At Mineral Springs Farm, George and Debbie Donnon and their two small children, April, 18 mos., and Lindsey, 5, are out to prove you can make it in farming even if you don't have a farm handed to you on a gold-plated deed.

This Maryland Farm Bureau Young Farm Couple of the Year started from scratch and have developed a nice 85-head Holstein milking cow herd, along with 80 heifer replacements.

Their herd average is just over 20,000 pounds and they farm 250 acres of corn silage, haylage, ground ear corn and use a by-pass protein product to balance the TMR ration. Their herd is housed in free-stalls and milked in a double-four parlor.

They have done all this by working for other dairymen, renting farms, buying used equipment, and sleeping on the floor until they could barter for beds and living room furniture. But they are not complaining. "What you work hard for you appreciate more," they say.

In fact, you could not find a more enthusiastic young couple with a positive outlook on life. Many times George has been on the manure spreader, fixing a broken chain under a full-load, on a cold, windy, winter day. But the Donnons say these bad days only make the good days all that much more enjoyable on the farm.

This couple works as a farm team, and they are adamant that husband and wife must work together on the farm if you are

Dairy Farmers Want Immediate Action

COLUMBIA CROSSROADS (Bradford Co.) — Nearly 100 dairy farmers and business people attended the spirited Dairy Rally conducted by Pro Ag last Wednesday in Columbia Crossroads.

They shook their heads in disbelief as Pro Ag Manager Arden Tewksbury revealed how low milk prices were going to decline.

Tewksbury said, "Dairy farmers will really get the message when they open their milk checks on January 1st and realize their payment for the first fifteen days of milk in December will be $11.67 per cwt. with the price probably declining more on February 1st."

Tewksbury read letters from both Senator Arlen Specter and Congressman Joe McDade, but the letters failed to really address the seriousness of the situation.

All three County Commissioners from Tioga County attended the Rally, as did Representative Scott Chadwick and personnel from the Pa. Milk Marketing Board.

Paul "Hap" Schatz, Agriculture Aid to Congressman Paul Kanjorski, addressed the Rally. Schatz said, "Congressman Kanjorski supports the efforts of Pro Ag." He told the farmers present, "I can't illustrate strong enough to you people how important it is for you to contact your Congressman on this and any issue." Schatz said, "If your elected officials don't hear from you, then they simply apply their time to other things." A warm reception was given to Schatz from the crowd because of his willingness to attend the Rally.

Tewksbury praised local farmers and business people for the significant number of calls they made to Washington. He said, "Many times I've been told that more calls have been made from northeastern Pa. than any other area in the United States."

Although Ken and Denise Sanner, ADC's Outstanding Young Cooperative Couple, were intent on farming successfully before attending the National Milk Producers Federation annual meeting and still are, they have redefined what that means. Organic Dairy Co-op Seeks Regional Producer Interest

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — The town of Colby, Wisconsin, is the namesake and founding location of the mildly flavored, soft, popular American cheese.

It is also the home area of Aaron Hoover, a dairy farmer who grew up on a family farm in Reamstown, Lancaster County.

Hoover was in town recently to visit with relatives and was accompanied by a regional organizer for a cooperative to which Hoover belongs: Coulee Region Organic Produce Pool (CROPP) Cooperative.

CROPP is headquartered in LaFarge, Wisconsin and is eight years old.

Though "produce" is generally associated with truck patch crops, Hoover is a dairyman with about 117 acres and a herd of 30 milking Holsteins that he has maintained for the past eight years using rotational grazing.

CROPP is his dairy market.

The cooperative is marketing a variety of "organic" foods, under the Organic Valley brand name, that its members raise according to a self-created set of rules.

Its dairy products line includes cultered unsalted and salted butter; whole milk, 2-percent milk, skim milk and half-and-half; mild, sharp, Colby, Monterey Jack, petite Swiss, and aged Swiss raw milk cheeses; reduced fat farmer, Monterey Jack and low-sodium cheddar; mozzarella, provolone

Delmarva Broiler

DECEMBER 24, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was limited as plants curtailed todays operations, and plan to close for the Holiday. Offerings were irregularly available, but adequate. Live supplies were at least moderate; weights were mixed and irregular. Processing schedules were very light today, and all reporting plants were set to close tommorow. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 59 to 73 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to fully steady. In the parts complex, bone-in breasts were no more than adequate. Other items were irregularly available.

DECEMBER 24, 1996

Trucklot buying activity was typical for a Christmas Eve day as both plants and distributors wound down for the holiday. Offers were limited as most plants ran reduced schedules. Demand was generally reported as seasonal in nature with most interest centering around holiday items. The market tone was steady.

NY Phil Frozen Eggs

DECEMBER 20, 1996

Prices were unchanged to lower. The market tone was barely steady to weak. Demand for immediate delivery was very light, and inquiry for January needs was mixed with most buyers wanting lower prices. Floor stocks were adequate, but not usually building due to many plants working reduced schedules. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the East for the week ending December 14, 1996 were up 7% from last week, and up 16% from the same week last year.

E. PA & NJ Poultry

DECEMBER 20, 1996

Early negotiated prices for next week were too few to report. The market was generally steady. Demand was moderate as most processing plants will reduce slaughter for upcoming holiday. Offerings were short to adequate for needs. Finished sales continued to easily clear available supplies.

National Egg Market

DECEMBER 24, 1996

Prices were unchanged to lower on the East Coast, and unchanged elsewhere. The market tone was steady to weak. Cartoned egg movement into retail channels remained mixed across the full range, but began to decrease as Christmas neared. Wholesale inquiry continued very light with most plants attempting to minimize post-holiday left-overs. Supplies were adequate to ample. Breaking stock supplies were also adequate to ample for the very light demand, and prices were unchanged to lower. Light type hen supplies were more available and about adequate as reduced holiday schedules approached.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

DEC. 30, 1996-JAN. 5, 1997

TWELFTH NIGHT, JAN. 5.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Among the various superstitions surrounding the advent of the new year is the nearly mandatory practice of noise-making at midnight on New Year's Eve. Now looked upon as mere revelry, it once was considered protection against evil spirits, who would be scared off by all the noise. Whistling, however, is strictly taboo, to whistle is to converse with the devil or invite him in. Sailors, actors and actresses, and miners are particularly cognizant of the ill luck associated with whistling. On board ship, whistling is thought to raise a storm. In the theatre, it is believed to close the show prematurely. For miners, it is a sign of alarm.

A whistling girl and a crowing hen,
Always come to no good end.

TIP OF THE WEEK

To reduce gas caused by eating beans, use the hot soak method. Bring them just to a boil, then let soak 4 hours and discard water. Add fresh water and cook.

BLACK-EYED HOPPIN' JOHN SALAD

(It's considered good luck to eat black-eyed peas on New Year's Day.)

2 cups cooked rice
2 cups cooked black-eyed peas (or one 16-ounce can)
1/2 pound ham, cubed
1 cup chopped carrots
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup chopped parsley

DRESSING.
1/2 cup olive oil
1/4 cup vinegar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon dried basil
1/8 teaspoon black pepper
1/8 teaspoon cayenne
1 bay leaf

Combine all ingredients and marinate salad in dressing for at least an hour. Rice and peas can be combined while still hot. Refrigerate. Remove bay leaf before serving.

Makes 8 servings

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If grass looks green in Janiveer, 'twill look worser all the year.

If there is no wind on New Year's Day, the summer will be dry; if there's a good breeze, there will be rain enough for a decent crop.

OPINION

A Christmas Meditation

About 18 years ago my wife Hannah and I received a special message — a picture and letter from an adoption agency introducing the person who would become our daughter. The letter said, "As we have prayed, we believe God wants you to be parents of this seven-year-old child." Our hearts melted.

In the Gospel according to Matthew (1:18-25) Joseph, a righteous man, discovered his fiance to be pregnant. Disappointed, he planned to quietly dissolve the contract for marriage. But Joseph received a message — a letter, so to speak — saying, "Forget the tradition, be your own person, do not be afraid to be a husband and father; Mary's son will save his people from their sins." The message melted Joseph's heart.

There are situations when the word of an expected birth causes anxiety and panic. Joseph experienced a gamut of emotions when he discovered Mary was pregnant.

Hannah and I were seeking a child, but there remained some trepidation, as is the case whenever parenthood is anticipated. What kind of child will be born to us or will be received through adoption? Are we truly ready to be parents?

Joseph received an heavenly message saying, "Do not be afraid to take Mary as your wife, for the child conceived from her is from the Holy Spirit. She will bear a son, and you are to name him Jesus, for he will save his people from their sins." That was all Joseph needed. He took Mary as his wife, she bore a son and they named him Jesus. The message of godly people to Hannah and me was, "We have prayed, and we believe God wants you to be parents of this seven-year-old child." That's all we needed to accept.

Joseph really had no idea of the journey that would begin with Mary's son, Jesus. He trusted the messenger and the message, "Do not be afraid ... "As a righteous man, Joseph was willing to set aside the potential disgrace to himself by his community. He willingly became the adoptive father to a son born from above in response to the assuring message from the angel.

The gospel accounts of the birth of Jesus the Christ contain themes of hope, celebration and peace. The central ideas are there if we but listen to the messengers, whether they be angels or our brothers and sisters who care about us.

Will you listen and respond to the message and the messengers this season?—Joseph L. Lapp.

Pennsylvania native Joseph L. Lapp is president of Eastern Mennonite University, Harrisonburg, Va.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Look At Feedbunk

Chester Hughes, extension livestock agent, reminds us that attentive feedbunk management is always important. However, when feed prices are high it is a good idea for cattle feeders to revisit feedbunk basics.

Good feedbunk management may be worth $10 to $20 per head more than average management. Cattle are self-propelled fermentation vats. The biggest enemy of fermentation is variation. Because cattle are not able to monitor their own feed intake, farmers must do it for them.

Consistent intake in cattle is based on them having a consistent diet of consistent amounts at consistent times. The use of ionophores may be a good management tool. Minimizing feed intake variability is important in maximizing feedlot performance.

It has been documented in the scientific literature that ionophores may aid in minimizing feed intake variability in cattle fed high grain diets. When the price of feed is high, ionophores add considerable value.

If you look at the ingredients in a ration, ionophores are a lower percentage cost of the total ration. If you receive a 7 percent improvement in feed efficiency, your savings are greater than what you may be paying for corn.

To Score Feedbunks

The accuracy of scales and feed trucks, as well as the quality of feed ingredients, may make or break good feedbunk management, according to Chester Hughes, extension livestock agent.

Having records of what cattle are eating day to day does not do much good unless the information is used and analyzed. It is important to use feedbunk scores in combination with records of the amount being fed in order to have a firm handle on where cattle have been in terms of consumption and where they need to go.

You will be able to determine if intakes are going up, coming down, or holding steady. The following is a feedbunk scoring system you may find useful:

- 0 — No feed remaining in the feedbunk.
- ½ — Scattered feed present. Most of the bottom of the feedbunk is exposed.
- 1 — Thin, uniform layer of feed across bottom of the bunk. Typically about one kernel deep.
- 2 — 25 to 50 percent of previous feed remaining.
- 3 — Crown of feed is thoroughly disturbed. Greater than 50 percent of feed remaining.
- 4 — Feed is virtually untouched. Crown of feed still noticeable.

Remember, good feedbunk management costs nothing more than a few minutes each day.

To Control Rodents

Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, reminds us that mice and other rodents take a heavy toll on ear corn stored in wooden and metal corn cribs.

The corn crib provides an ideal habitat for rodents. It provides sheltered nesting areas out of the cold winter weather along with what seems like an endless supply of food.

The control of mice and rats under these conditions is very difficult. However, several things may be done to help keep rodent populations down.

First, traps may be used to monitor the extent of the problem. Trapping alone will do little to eliminate the problem. Second, screening wherever possible to exclude rodents will also help to keep numbers in control. However, when a severe problem exists, commercial rodent control measures must be used including tracking powder and baits.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Yesterday is but a dream. Tomorrow is a vision of hope. Look to this day for its life."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

NOW I CAN GO!
December 29, 1996

NOW I CAN GO!
December 29, 1996
Background Scripture:
Luke 2:21-40
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 42:1-13

When I read the first two chapters of Luke, I am often struck with the recollection of all the great music that has been inspired by these words: the Annunciation (1:32-35), the Magnificat (1:46-55), Handel's Messiah, and a great wealth of Christmas carols (both chapters 1 & 2). In these two chapters we find a number of people who are lifted above their normal lives by the presence of the Holy Spirit: Zechariah, Elizabeth, Mary, Simeon and Anna. God's Spirit inspires them and their words, in turn, inspire us.

There is another text from Luke 2 that became an important part of the Christian liturgy in the fifth century A.D. It is known to us by its Latin name, Nunc Dimittis, taken from the opening words of Simeon: "Lord, now lettest thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation which thous has prepared in the presence of fall people, a light for relevation to the Gentiles, and for glory to thy people Israel" (2:29-32).

Who is this man Simeon? We really don't know anything about him except that he was righteous, devout and had received a revelation from God promising that he would not see death before he had seen "the Lord's Christ." His words lead us to believe that he was advanced in years and some scholars have deducted that he was a rabbi — the blessing he gives is that of a rabbi — and one scholar has even speculated that Simeon was the son and father of two of Judaism's greatest rabbis, Hillel and Gamaliel. But there is little evidence and no proof.

LOOKING & PRAYING

We also know that he was "looking for the consolation of Israel" (2:25). "Looking" suggests that he was also praying for the consolation for Israel — the unfolding of God's promise to his people. This pious man has been praying for the fulfillment of the most stupendous promise ever made and, when he takes the baby Jesus into his arms, he realizes that that awesome reality is fulfilled in this tiny infant. It is this realization that leads him to bless God.

So what is the importance of his Nunc Dimittis?" Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace ..." It means that he has now experienced that for which he has been living. It means that his life has been fulfilled, his prayers answered, and he is ready to go for nothing could equal or excel what he has just experienced.

We need to try to put ourselves in Simeon's place. What would it take for us to say Nuc Dimittis? What would bring us the fulfillment that would make life completely worthwhile? At what point could you say, I'm ready to go?

NOW I CAN GO

On a purely personal level I might say that I'd like to live long enough to see my grandchildren grown up, maybe graduated from college and married. Someone else might just want to be able to live to the year 2000. Some people feel their lives fulfilled by writing a fulfilling book, painting a picture, or composing a piece of music that says what they want it to say. But there can be no higher aspiration then that of Simeon: "mine eyes have seen thy salvation ..." All other goals and promises pale next to the assurane that in Christ I — and everyone else — can face eternity unafraid.

Simeon's Nunc Dimittis also is inspired because he suddenly realizes that, what he has sought for Israel, is actually being given to the whole world. "... thy salvation which thou hast prepared in the presence of all peoples, a light for relevation to the Gentiles, and for glory to thy people Israel" (2:30-32).

There can be no Nunc Dimittis that is purely personal and parochial. The only one that fits a promise and fulfillment so great and glorious is the one that takes the rest of the world with us.

Organic Dairy Co-op

and string Italian cheeses; cream and Neufchatel cheeses; and Feta cheese.

It also markets organic brown eggs, apples and apple cider seasonally, and vegetables.

It promotes the fact that it uses non-homogenized organic milk and microbial enzymes instead of rennet, and salt without flowing agents.

What this follows are dietary beliefs that may or may not be supported by scientific research, but in general hold that the human body and its digestive system was not made to be sustained on a food chemistry that includes man-made chemicals or advanced processing technology.

Non-homogenized milk is regarded as more healthy by some who follow these dietary beliefs, because it is argued that the homogenization process alters the size of fat and protein molecules or globules suspended in milk, and that the human system is designed to digest milk in its natural state, even though non-homogenized milk may separate and not be as constant in texture.

In general, organic farming follows a no-man-made chemistry regime.

However, the term "organic" is currently undefined for most regulatory applications. Thus there are a number of differing definitions and "organic" practices.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture was to have created a working definition this past year and a certification process, but because of the different independently started "organic" organizations making up their own versions of a definition, the desire to be established as first in a new market, and the delays that are implied in transitioning a farm from current commercial practices to "organic" practices, that definition is now expected sometime in coming months.

In the meantime, while most states are awaiting a federal definition (so that interstate commerce won't be a problem for instate producers), some states, such as California, have created their own standards.

Other than states, producer organizations and even individual farm-markets have developed their own standards for production of crop to which the label, "organic" is applied.

The CROPP cooperative is one which adopted its own standards, but since its standards are more strict, they are also approved under the standards of the Organic Crop Improvement Association (OCIA).

Steve Fiscus, of Flinstone, Maryland, is working on behalf of CROPP, sort of as an advanceman.

His job is to seek out producers in the Mid-Atlantic region who may be willing to adopt the cooperative's organic standards in producing milk, become a member of the cooperative, and then be included on hauling routes to deliver the organic milk to an appropriate processor.

Currently, he's seeking producers interested in working in this niche.

The niche is real, but its strength as a market uncertain.

CROPP started in the Midwest, where dairy production had been leading the nation until California production skyrocketted.

However, as more urbanites and rural people have become skeptical of modern agricultural production practices, the "organic" name has become more and more accepted by mainstream consumers. These primarily niche consumers will pay a premium.

According to Fiscus, he fully expects that OCIA standards will be within the standards adopted by the USDA and the majority of states.

In working to line-up potential producers to supply the minimum 40,000 pounds milk per day production that has been projected as needed to establish a dependable organic market, Fiscus has been holding meetings to talk to producers about the cooperative and the successes it has found in the Midwest and more recently in Washington state.

According to some literature distributed by Fiscus, "CROPP Cooperative is presently considering organizing a regional pool in your area. We are seeking producers who are interested in joining our cooperative as member/producer/owner. We need to find a minimum of 300-400 cows who (sic) qualify to start a new pool of organic dairy production. We also are considering regional egg pools, as we have an organic egg program in our cooperative."

Though restrictions to observe in producing milk for CROPP are more specific, there are 11 basic qualifications a new member would need to join:

- The bulk tank should hold five milkings in flush, with a minimum storage capacity of four milkings required.
- The operation has to be certified organic by an approved certification agent.
- Membership in CROPP and abiding by membership requirements is required.
- Membership with the cooperating milk handler and abiding by its requirements is necessary.
- Average somatic cell counts for the year have to average less than 400,000.
- The product has to be Grade A, IMS milk with the farmer having a history of producing good quality milk.
- There is an equity requirement that is equal to $11 per hundredweight of average monthly hundredweight production.
- The producer must be willing to not use antibiotics and hormones.
- Must be willing to accept that the CROPP dairy pool policy is that, in extreme cases of oversupply, the last producer joined would be the first dropped.
- A Bang's vaccination, or a blood test proof, is required.

The requirements also extend to feeds. The cows have to eat certified organically raised forages and grains for at least a year prior to the

World Wide Leader in Quality Isolation Calf Housing

Did You Know?

University tests and tens of 1,000s of satisfied dairy producers have proven isolation calf housing, hutches, are absolutely the best way to raise healthy calves Progressive dairy producers do not sacrifice calf health for personal convenience

Calf-tel is the only thermoformed hutch Thermoforming is a process that imparts strength to the polymer like forging does to steel Rotocasting, a process used by all other plastic hutch manufacturers, creates a weaker, less durable product that is prone to cracking

Calf-tel is the only hutch manufactured with completely opaque material to effectively eliminate the green house effect This heat trapping effect overheats calves when temperatures climb above 80° F and also causes uncontrollable temperature swings daily when temperatures drop below freezing Over 100,000 Calf-tels are helping raise healthier, growthier calves worldwide from Florida through the sunbelt to California.

Washington across the dairy belt to New England and in 20 foreign countries

Calf-tel is the only hutch made of high molecular weight polyethylene plastic with a high load UV blocking pigment This quality material enables Hampel Corp to warranty Calf-tel for ten years, the longest in the calf hutch industry

Long after competitive hutches are discarded, used Calf-tels sell from $125 to $200 each–even after ten years of use Such a high residual value decreases cost per hutch to as low as $12 per year

When operator comfort is a concern, creative dairy producers have provided covered service alleys or placed Calf-tels in two or three sided shelters during inclement times

Watch this space for future calf rearing tips.

Why a Beef Checkoff on Dairy Calves?

✔ The mandatory beef checkoff requires that one dollar per head be assessed on all sales of bovine animals — regardless of size, breed or value The checkoff was designed to be fair to all producers — everyone benefits, everyone invests

✔ Dairy producers earn approximately 10% to 15% of their net income from beef sales Whether you're selling cull cows or bulls; bred or open females; veal or bull calves to be fed by someone else; steers or any other bovine, a dollar on each head sold is remitted to your state beef council Each segment of the industry contributes to the total pounds of beef for sale at the grocery store or restaurant When prices are good, everyone benefits. Therefore, everyone pays — even in a down market

✔ The $1-per-head checkoff cannot guarantee a profit on each head sold There are numerous other factors, such as feed prices, weather, and supply that contribute to the purchase or selling price of each animal. The checkoff is in place to help increase demand for beef and veal, thereby increasing the potential to make a profit on animals.

✔ Nationally, 20% - 25% of beef on the market comes from dairy cattle, including about 45% of all ground beef sold. Promotions designed to target ground beef, such as this summer's beef and Kraft cheese retail promotion, help improve ground beef sales

✔ It is sometimes hard to see the benefits of the checkoff when the value of calves and cull cows is depressed. But, take away the beef/veal checkoff and we will quickly lose our market share to poultry and alternative protein sources. We will lose our strong relationship with health professionals; our stories about beef and veal in magazines; our televisions ads; and, eventually, demand for your animals.

✔ Almost all of the people working on checkoff programs have farm backgrounds. Their families are suffering through this cattle cycle — just like you. Their hearts are involved in the industry. They are working hard to assure that the income made on an animal is the best it can be under the circumstances.

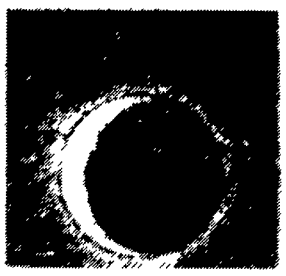
INTRODUCING FULLTIM™
A REVOLUTIONARY NEW FE
CAN TURN YOUR HERD INTO

That's right, feed your dairy herd our remarkable new FullTime™ forage, and within a week, you could see results like those at Michigan State University (MSU). Cows fed Cargill's new FullTime forage hybrids on average consumed 8 percent more dry matter, resulting in 5.5 more pounds of milk per cow per day while showing improved body condition



A Forage Like This Only Comes Around Once In A Blue Moon. There are at least two ways fiber digestibility can improve a cow's performance. One, by increasing the energy density of its diet, and the other, by increasing dry-matter intake. It's these two components working together that explain the remarkable test results with FullTime forage. You see, our new line of FullTime forages contain up to 40 percent less indigestible lignin than traditional hybrids. This means that FullTime forage rates higher in fiber digestibility. That, in turn, contributes to the increase in dry-matter intake of nearly 4½ pounds per cow per day in the MSU trial. By digesting fiber more rapidly and more completely, cows can move feed out of the rumen more quickly and make room for more feed. This translates into more energy for milk production in an optimally balanced ration and is what makes FullTime forage a nutritional breakthrough.

A Better Forage All The Way Around. No longer do you have to deal with the timing or weather issues related to hay crops. Or balance grain yield over forage quality like you do with other hybrids. With FullTime forage you get high-fiber digestibility, low lignin, improved dry-matter intake, better cow performance, and perhaps best of all, a harvest that's only once a year.

Atlantic Dairy Cooperative Board Elects Officers

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — Atlantic Dairy Cooperative's board of directors elected officers for the coming year and announced the results of director elections during the cooperative's 1996 annual meeting.

Ivo V. Otto Jr. of Carlisle was elected to his second term as president of the cooperative. Otto has served on the board for 30 years. He and his wife, Gladys, operate Mayapple Farms in partnership with their daughter Victoria Otto and grandson David Masland III. They farm 300 acres and milk 130 Holsteins.

Re-elected as first vice president was Roy W. Hetrick of Bernville. Hetrick, who was elected to Altantic's board in 1974, farmers with his wife, Betty, and their sons. The Hetricks own 1,050 acres and farm an additional 450 acres. They milk 375 Holstein cows under the name Hetrickdale Farms.

Re-elected as second vice president was Charles E. Schilling of Petersburg, who has served on the board since 1976. Schilling and his wife, Sandy, are in partnership with their son, Curtis. They farm 460 acres and milk 160 Holstein cows.

Also re-elected as officers were Robert M. Dever of Philadelphia, secretary and chief executive officer, and James R. Barnett of Strasburg, assistant secretary and member relations manager.

In addition to the officers, the following diretors were re-elected to a three-year term during the fall district meetings: Robert R. Gehman, Coopersburg, District 1; Nelson Habecker, Lancaster, District 5; Roy W. Hetrick, Bernville, District 9; Elvin M. Rohrer, Cochranville, District 11; Curtis E. Akers, Quarryville, District 12; Donald C. Bergey, Millville, District 19; William R. England, Williamsburg, District 20; and Elizabeth A. Smith, Montrose, District 23.

Atlantic Dairy Cooperative represents dairy farm families in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

In other business, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative's board of directors has adopted a new quality premium program that now includes a third-tier payment level.

The new program to go into effect Jan. 1 expands on the cooperative's current quality premium program by adding a 40-cent payment level to the current 10- and 20-cent levels.

"This program puts ADC at the top of the list as far as quality premiums are concerned," said Don M. Breiner, quality and field services manager. "It gives each member an excellent opportunity to put additional dollars in their milk check."

To qualify for the premiums, Atlantic members must meet a series of seven quality standards. The requirements for all three levels are: no antibiotics in the milk; a cryoscope reading of -0.530-c/-0.550c; a farm score of 90 points or higher, and no rejected loads for any reason.

For the individual levels, the following standards apply: • 10-cent premium: plate loop count of 20,000 or less; preliminary incubation count of 50,000 or less; and somatic cell count of 350,000 or less. • 20-cent premium: plate loop count of 10,000 or less; preliminary incubation count of 30,000 or less; and somatic cell count of 200,000 or less. • 40-cent premium: plate loop count of 5,000 or less; preliminary incubation count of 20,000 or less; and somatic cell count of 150,000 or less.

For more information about Atlantic's quality premium program, contact Don M. Breiner at 1-800-645-6455.

Announces New Approach For Breed Improvement

AJCA AMERICAN JERSEY CATTLE ASSOCIATION NEWS

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The American Jersey Cattle Association has announced an innovative approach to breed improvement through the Genetic Diversity Program (GDP).

The GDP is a breeding plan that optimizes genetic gain while maintaining genetic diversity.

The first phase of the GDP offers the Jersey breed an opportunity to sample young bulls that help minimize inbreeding but also have the genetic capability to transmit outstanding production and fitness traits.

Young bulls whose ancestors are different from their potential mates help minimize inbreeding.

High levels of inbreeding are known to contribute to decreased profit through increases in calf mortality, reproductive problems and lost milk production.

Beginning Jan. 1, young bulls identified as measurably different from the cow population will have an opportunity to be nominated for the Genetic Diversity Program.

Young bulls that are least related to the Jersey cow population and meet rigid production standards are elibible for enrollment in the GDP.

Progeny of bulls enrolled in the GDP will receive discounted registration rates and earn performance program credits.

To qualify under the Genetic Diversity Program, each young bull's pedigree is compared to the 32 bulls with the most registered daughters.

The average relationship is called Kinship or K Value. A K Value is assigned to each young bull. Those below the group's average qualify for consideration.

Young bulls that meet the relationship requirements must also meet or exceed the 30th percentile of the active AI bulls based on Parent Average Protein and/or PTI.

All young bulls, regardless of ancestry, continue to be eligible for enrollment in the AJCA Young Sire Program if they meet or exceed the 70th percentile of the active AI bulls.

1996 Presented Rough Year For Dairy Producers

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Cooperative Extension
Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — I think we should give ourselves a bit of cheer for the New Year.

For many of us, 1996 has been a rough year. Yet it also offered some sunshine in between all the snowstorms, ice, rain and floods.

Statistics bear out that this past year was the wetest on record since 1883. Prices for grain feed were high, and good milk prices fleeting — going up promisingly and then slumping again.

There were also the worries about the influence of the cheese auction in Wisconsin and the uncertainties about the reorganization of milk marketing orders. Still we are thankful once again for health and happiness in both our two-legged and four-legged families, and hope for more in 1997!

I want to add to this good cheer some thoughts about why we should continue to feel good about being in the milk business. Although we are "milking fools," working with our dairy animals — dairy cows, dairy goats and dairy sheep — twice or three times a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year, mostly with no vacation. Then there is the feeding and breeding our animals to ever higher performance just to stay in business and ahead of the creditors.

And we work with animals that are themselves "milking fools," with their yields exceeding 100 pounds per day for cows or 15 pounds per day for the little goats, or 20,000 pounds per 10-month cow lactation or 5,000 pounds per goat lactation — levels that were unheard of just a few years ago. With an average short life span of only 4 to 5 years (which defies the ecnomics of longevity), we are producing from the mother of all food animals the best food in the world — milk — a food that excels all foods in its natural quality and its contribution to human nutrient requirements.

So, at the turn to the New Year, my thoughts are full of thanks for all the two-legged and four-legged milking fools that, despite all the hardships and economic questions, make sure people have a wonderful milk supply. There is no other food like milk — a food that offers complete nutriton (proteins, carbohydrates, fats, vitamins and minerals) and refreshment, all packaged in one.

And because of its complete balance of nutrients, milk is the only food that never spoils. If you put a piece of hamburger and some apples and a glass of milk on a table, leave them for four weeks, when you return you will find that the hamburger and the apples have spoiled and putrefied. Not true for the milk. The only thing that will have happened to the milk is that it turned sour, became like yogurt and, more likely than not, already is in the state of a cheese. This just-fermented cheese, surrounded by edible whey, which is only the change of milk in appearance and structure. It is perfectly fine to eat, and for some people, even more delicious than the original milk. This fermentation is a natural process accomplished without the addition of any preservative!

Thus, milk is not only a perfectly balanced food between its proteins, carbohydrates and fats, but it is unique in its composition too. In last month's Cowtale, I discussed some of the distinctive values of short-chain and medium-chain length fatty acids that make up butter and milk fat to such a significant degree, giving us fatty acids, which are not fattening but provide direct energy and cholesterol protection instead. I told you that feeding cows differently can increase or decrease these beneficial fatty acids in butter.

As you can see from this table that milk, yogurt and cheese are by far the best sources of the vital mineral calcium for us, at least in those amounts of food that humans could reasonably be expected to eat every day. This list gives only the best foods in terms of calcium. That is why I feel good about being part of the "milking fools," both the two-legged and four-legged kind, and thank them this season for their hard work. I hope you do too

1997 Pennsylvania Dog Licenses Available

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania dog licenses are now on sale for 1997 at all county treasurer's offices, according to Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius.

"There has been a change in the state law, and all puppies three months of age and older need to be licensed by Jan. 1 each year," Brosius said. "A dog license serves as a positive means of identification for your pet and can help ensure that lost dogs are returned to their owners.

"It is a small, but smart investment to start off the new year with a tag that makes your dog easily identifiable."

A license for a dog that has not been spayed or neutered is $8. Licenses for spayed or neutered dogs are $6. Licenses for dogs owned by senior citizens or handicapped citizens are $6; for spayed or neutered, $4. A regular lifetime license is $51; for spayed or neutered $31. If a license is purchased from an agent of the county treasurer, an additional 50 cents will be charged.

Owners of a dog without a valid license may be fined up to $300 plus court costs for each dog in violation of the law.

For more information, residents can call the Bureau of Dog Law Enforcement at (717) 787-4833.

New Holland Vegetable Day Sets Program

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland Vegetable Day will be held on Monday, Jan. 20, starting at 9:30 a.m. at the Summit Valley Elementary School, one mile south of New Holland.

Mountain Fresh, Mountain Pride, and Mountain Spring are familiar varieties among local fresh market tomato growers. The man responsible for developing these varieties, Dr. Randy Gardner from North Carolina State University, will be the featured speaker at the annual New Holland Vegetable Day sponsored by the ELANCO School District and Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Gardner's "Mountain" varieties are known for their large, blemish-free tomatoes and vigorous disease resistant plants. Gardner will discuss the recent developments in tomato breeding and discuss the North Carolina system of late season tomato production.

In addition to Dr. Gardner, a number of extension specialists, seed, and chemical representatives will be on hand. Dr. Joe Fiola from Rutger's University will discuss raspberry production. Penn State marketing specialist Larry Yager will discuss trends in vegetable marketing.

Variety trials are always popular. This year's program will feature new varieties in strawberries, hanging baskets, bedding plants, pumpkins, specialty potatoes, and peaches. The seed dealers will round out the afternoon with a discussion of new and exciting vegetable varieties they are promoting this year.

Proper use and management of crop protectents such as Ridomil, Admire, and Vapam will also be covered. Cut flowers, fruit tree training and contract vegetable production round out the program. The program offers something for anyone interested in commercial vegetable production.

Participants may buy lunch at the school or pack their own. There is no charge for the meeting.

For more information, contact Jeff Stoltzfus at (717) 354-1522.

Maryland Dairy Association Takes Form

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

FREDERICK, Md. — A Maryland dairy association representing dairy producers is starting to take form, following an organizational meeting held Dec. 13.

The creation of an association has been called for by the state's dairy leaders for several years, because of a lack of representation by dairy producers' concerns in developing Maryland policies.

In the meantime, despite close proximity to markets and a natural environment conducive to dairy production, the political and business environment has been such that the state's dairy farmers have been disappearing quickly.

While the dairy processors of Maryland and its other leading agricultural commodity producers have associations to promote their respective sectors, the dairy producers have not enjoyed the benefit of having a strong, recognizable association promoting producer concerns.

The need for such an organization was recognized by the 1993 Maryland Dairy Task Force — an assemblage of people created by the Maryland General Assembly and tasked to investigate and make recommendations upon the health of the state's dairy industry.

It recommended the formation of a dairy association, among other actions to improve the business environment for its instate dairy industry.

The issue was raised again during a public hearing on the preliminary findings of the 1996 Maryland Dairy Task Force, by Myron Wilhide, a Carroll County dairy farmer, leader in the Maryland Farm Bureau, and member of that task force.

At the time, Wilhide said that the 1996 task force was the third task force including, and since, 1993, and that he served on all three.

One of the main reasons for establishing a dairy producer-interest association is to help establish the political muscle necessary to bring about public recognition of the efforts of the dairy task forces and the current recommendations.

For example, the 1996 Dairy Task Force, in its preliminary recommendations report, called for the Maryland Legislature to provide its state secretary of agriculture with the authority to set minimum retail and wholesale prices on milk, similar to the authority held by the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, and that of the Virginia.

During the hearing of the preliminary 1996 Task Force findings, Wilhide announced that a Nov. 26 informational meeting would be held to gauge producer interest in supporting an association.

Wilhide said that as a result of that informational meeting, held at the New Midway Fire Hall, about 130 people attended, representing well the state's dairy producer regions.

With the consensus that a producer organization would be supported, out of those 130, 24 people representing the various regions were selected, again through consensus, to form an interim board of directors.

The interim board more recently met on Dec. 13 at the Frederick County Extension Office and established an interim set of bylaws, officers and several committees.

The board is to meet again 10:30 a.m., Jan. 21, again at the Frederick Extension Office.

During the Dec. 13 meeting, the interim officers elected by the interim board were Wilhide, as president; Janet Stile, of Boonsboro, vice president; and Laura Kaminsky, Wentz, secretary/treasurer.

Stiles is a member of a dairy farm family, while Kaminsky is a field representative for the Maryland Farm Bureau.

The Maryland Farm Bureau is allowing the use of its headquarters building in Randallstown to serve as a temporary office for the dairy association.

Formation of committees and committee appointments were held as key because of the need to act quickly to be properly prepared to represent the state's dairy producers when the state Legislature begins work in January.

Edwin Fry, of Chestertown, a dairy farmer, was appointed as chair of the Legislative Coalition Committee. Other members of the Coalition Committee are William Godwin of Hagerstown, Jesse Burall of Monrovia, Harold Lenhart of Utica, and Sean Jones of Massey.

The committee was assigned a priority — to help line up sponsorship for intended proposed legislation, "Fairness in Milk Marketing Act."

The committee is to attempt to seek legislative vehicles to institute the recommendations of the 1996 Dairy Task Force.

According to Wilhide, "We've had the Task Force working real hard in addressing the problems of the dairy industry in Maryland."

He said that the association needs to support those findings, which include creating fairness in milk marketing legislation; extending milk dating; supporting Maryland dairy industry and getting programs developed; bringing farmers up to speed in marketing and technology; and to be part of guiding research and programs in the University of Maryland for dairy production.

"The first thing is to get (those recommendations) into legislation," Wilhide said.

Wilhide, of Keysville, is in partnership with brother Richard on the 600-acre family farm where they milk 160 grade Holsteins. They ship milk to Mid-America Dairymen.

Their farm has been in the family for about 130 years.

Wilhide said that although he has been involved in organizations, such as the Farm Bureau, this is the first time he has helped establish an organization.

The Farm Bureau, he said, does an excellent job of representing commodity groups in the state.

"The Farm Bureau has been very eager to support, in Annapolis, that which needs to be supported. It's just a matter that they can't speak for dairy farmers," Wilhide said.

In other initial committee formation, Stiles was named to head a Membership and Finance Committee. Other members are Will Godwin of Hagerstown, Fern Hines of Union Bridge, Jere F. DeBaugh of Boonsboro, and Stanley Fultz of New Market who is the extension dairy science agent for Frederick County.

The Membership and Finance Committee recommended, and it was agreed to by the interim board during the Dec. 13 meeting, that association dues would be $40 per member with each member having a vote.

Although not yet established, it was discussed that dues for those wishing to be charter members may be higher.

A Publicity Committee was also formed with Robert Peters, a milking management specialist; T. Milton Nelson, agricultural editor of the Cooperative Extension Service at University of Maryland; and Nola Ramsburg of Walkersville. Becky Long, the assistant farm editor of the Frederick News-Post is an ex-officio member.

That committee is set to create an association newsletter that would be jointly sponsored by the Maryland Department of Agriculture and the cooperative extension service.

Wilhide said the newsletter is to go to every dairyman in Maryland, informing of the association, goals, objectives and membership. The newsletter is to be used for the exchange of ideas, he said.

In the meantime, he said that what dairy farmers can do is to be willing to talk to their respective legislators and to consumers about the importance of the dairy industry to the state and to its communities.

Will We Stay On Top?

LARRY SPECHT
Professor Emeritus
Dairy Science
Penn State University

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Those of us who work with the U.S. dairy industry like to think that we have the best cows and the best genetics.

However, there are people in Europe who challenge that belief. Why do they think that we have lost the leadership in dairy cattle genetics?

They maintain that their progeny test programs have higher reliabilities, that they have better identification on their animals and that their approach to dairy cattle improvement is more organized and more efficient at finding the best genetics.

They are particularly critical of the way some well-publicized but poorly sampled U.S. sires have bombed once their second-crop daughters calved.

Let's look at the history of dairy cattle improvement in this country.

Almost all of the foundation stock in our present-day dairy breeds came from importations from Europe in the latter part of the 1800s.

Breeders in the U.S. emphasized milk production from the start, in contrast to the Europeans who favored a more "dual purpose" type of animal.

Once our artificial insemination industry adopted large scale progeny testing programs in the 1960s, the United States' advantage in production per cow became more obvious with each passing year.

When the dairy cattle breeding industry in Europe (Holland, Germany and France, in particular) realized that they were falling behind, they set out to make up the ground they had lost. And we were glad to help them!

Large amounts of semen from our best bulls were sent overseas. A limited number of live animals were also exported.

Once embryo transfer became practical it was easier and less expensive to utilize that technology to export dairy genetics.

The ultimate strategy employed by the Europeans was to buy some of our best cows, flush them at a facility in this country and ship the embryos back home.

All of this, especially the semen sales, made for a profitable venture for the U.S. dairy industry and helped keep the cost of AI service down.

Someone once said that selling breeding stock was a peculiar business. Where else do you attempt to sell your best to those who will be your future competition?

We have certainly done just that, and even though there were those who warned of the consequences, we sold and continue to sell our best to the counties that now challenge us.

I do not believe that we have lost the lead but we must work hard to stay on top.

We are importing semen from bulls that are at the top of the sire lists in Holland, Germany and France. We won't know for another year or so if there will be important changes in their production and type summaries when the results are based on U.S. daughter information.

To date, nearly all such bulls have U.S. sires and U.S. maternal grandsires in their pedigrees and should be good bets from a genetic standpoint.

Whatever the outcome, we need to:

1. Continue our large scale progeny testing programs but increase the number of daughters and the number of herds for each sire. We need better reliabilities than many of our current progency test sires get on their first summary. We need 80 to 100 daughters in almost that many herds, instead of the 40 to 50 that we sometimes get.

2. We need to eliminate the errors and omissions that are found in our production records. The newly launched Herd and Cow Profiles that will soon be available from DHIA will allow end users to evaluate information more carefully. There can be no room for incomplete and/or biased information in our herd and cow data if we are to compete effectively.

3. AI units need to monitor more closely the results they are getting (or not getting) from the herds that participate in their young sire sampling programs. Too often, these programs are looked upon by some herds as a source of cheap (or even free) semen. They feel no obligation to identify, raise and milk the daughters of young sires. Such cattle are often the first to be sold to the neighbor who is not on test, or consigned to a sale, or shipped overseas. From a genetic standpoint, the daughters of progeny test sires are the most valuable animals in the herd. Their information tells us if we are making progress!

Herds that do not keep accurate records and do not produce an acceptable number of identified milking 2-year-olds in relation to the number of units of young sire semen used should be dropped from the studs' cooperator programs.

4. We should combine our efforts whenever possible. Wouldn't it be a step forward to have all of the production records from all herds in North America in the same data base? Then all sires in North America would have their evaluation calculated using the same procedures. We would not have to depend on estimates of a sire's breeding ability from data in one country in order to gauge his breeding merit in another country. The same approach could be used in Europe. If we are going "global," then edit procedures and sire evaluation techniques for all countries need to be standardized.

We have the cattle population and we have the necessary evaluation tools in place. We have done a good job in the past but we need to do a better job in the future if we are to remain at the top.

Dairy Farmers Want Immediate Action

The Pro Ag Manager said, "This time your calls are really paying off because U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman has called for a meeting of Dairy and Farm Organization Leaders on Thursday, December 19th." Tewksbury was one of the people invited to the session.

The Rally was covered by several newspapers and three TV stations.

Many of the dairy farmers present expressed anger with the present system of pricing milk and strongly urged Tewksbury to relate their anger to officials in Washington.

Pro Ag presented charts at the Rally that illustrates the potential economic loss to various counties because of the serious drop in milk prices. For one month the estimated economic loss will be — Bradford $9.8 million, Tioga $5.1 million, Susquehanna 4.5 million, Wayne 3 million, Wyoming 1.1 million and Sullivan 900 thousand. Tewksbury said multiply these figures by 12 months and the amounts become staggering, "and people don't care."

A large amount of time at the Rally was given to the farmers to express their thoughts concerning other options they might take. On an unoffical vote taken, 90% of the audience favored the possibility of a strike or uniting all farmers under the same name.

These actions were contemplated if existing efforts failed.

Tewksbury did attend the meeting with Secretary of Agriculture Glickman on Thursday and reported that the Secretary was very attentive to the problems facing dairy farmers as well as other ag commodities. There appears to be strong reservations as to whether the Secretary has the authority to floor the price without a hearing.

Glickman told the farm leaders, "Congress has put dairy farmers in a very weak position with the passage of the recent Farm BIll and now they expect me to solve the problems."

At the session with Glickman, Pro Ag and the National Family Farm Coalition continue to push for flooring the Basic Formula Price at $15.00 (on all milk), which would return a price of at least $16.00 per cwt. to area dairy farmers. N.F.O. was on the same wave length as was the Wisconsin Farmers Union Coop.

National Farmers Union stated the floor price should be at least $14.00 per cwt. on all milk.

National Milk Producers felt the floor price should be only $13.00 per cwt. and pertain only to Class I and Class II and not Class III milk, where the milk is used for cheese and butter.

Both Pro Ag and Wisconsin and Farmers Union Milk Coop strongly suggested this proposal was not acceptable. Both Pro Ag and the Wisconsin Milk Producers Coop strongly suggested that in the future that the milk be priced in relationship to the national average cost of production.

Tewksbury also presented to Secretary Glickman a petition supporting the $15.00 floor price that was signed by the farmers present at the meeting.

Another Rally is being considered some time in January.

Maryland To Host Forestry, Horticultural Marketing Seminars

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA), in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS), will host "Marketig Opportunities for Forestry and Horticultural Products in the Caribbean Basin and Latin America" on Jan. 9-10. The featured speaker will be Gary Groves, the agricultural trade officer assigned to the U.S. Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

"The presentations and discussions will focus specifically on developing markets for Maryland forestry and horticultural products," said Maryland Department of Agriculture Secretary Lewis R. Riley. "This is a rare opportunity to meet and discuss market conditions, cultural differences and potential customers with an agricultural trade officer who has firsthand knowledge of these exciting markets.

"Agricultural Trade Officers are stationed overseas and work to develop and expand markets for U.S. agricultural exports. Latin America and the Caribbean Basin have been identified as an excellent and as yet untapped market for US agricultural products," he said.

The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) has reduced barriers to U.S. products. Rising income levels and increased tourism throughout the region are creating demand for U.S. products.

"Because the Maryland Department of Agriculture has worked aggressively to promote exports, we have been selected as one of only 15 states to host such a seminar," said Riely. "A similar event held for food businesses last July was very successful in introducing Maryland companies to profitable opportunities and to the individuals who can help in the process."

The seminar will be held Jan. 9 at the Sheraton Hotel in Hagerstown and will be repeated on Jan. 10 at the department's headquarters building in Annaplois.

Senator Paul Sarbanes, an advocate of international trade opportunities, plans to attend the seminar in Hagerstown. Following lunch, there will be time for one-on-one meetings with the agricultural trade officers as well as with Foreign Agricultural Service officials based in Washington. These officials will assist in answering your questions about phytosanitary regulations and technical requirements to export forestry and horticultural products.

For additional information or to attend the seminars, contact Errol Small, Chief of International Marketing, or any member of the MDA International Marketing staff at (410) 841-5770.

tent of milk is calcium, the mineral that humans need daily in recommended digested and absorbed amounts of 800 milligram; nursing mothers and young children need even more per day — 1,500 milligrams. Notice, I said digested and absorbed, because many calcium pills, including just chalk, are very poorly digested and absorbed, around 10 percent only. This means that one must eat 8,000 milligrams per day to get the recommended amount, to prevent osteoporosis, tooth problems, even some colon cancer, muscle fatigue and nervousness. Why is milk calcium different? Because of the synergy of vitamin D in milk and the milk sugar lactose, which both greatly aid in the digestion and absorption of calcium. So, if you do not like milk, where do you get your calcium?

Yogurt and cheese are excellent alternative sources of calcium, especially for people who are lactose-intolerant. The lactose in yogurt is partly fermented and there is no lactose in most cheeses. There is, of course, milk fortified with the lactase enzyme, which helps people who can't drink milk get calcium.

How much milk do you need to drink or how much yogurt, cheese or other foods must you eat to get 800 milligrams of calcium pe day?

Farm Financial Management School Jan. 29

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Agriculture Committee of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce invites you to join them for the Financial Management School to be held on Wednesday, Jan. 29, at the Southern Market Center.

The program is an intensive all-day seminar on financial and employee-related topics designed for owners of large, multi-enterprise farm operations. This intensive all-day program is a unique opportunity for farm owners and operators to recieve valuable training on business and financial topics directly related to managing a large farming operation.

The limited class size and the chance to bring your own personal situations and questions makes this a unique opportunity to find answers to agriculture's tough business questions. There are several new parts of the seminar for 1997 including a case study for analysis and agriculture on the Internet.

Two dynamic and nationally recognized instructors have been secured for the 1997 farm school based on their experience and ability to work "ground level" with intensive agriculture operations. Michael Boehlje is a professor of agribusiness at the Center for Agricultural Business at Purdue University. Prior to his current position, Boehlje was on the faculty at the University of Minnesota and Iowa State University. His work focuses primarily on strategic planning, visioning, and business policy. Boehlje has written three books and more than 350 publications.

Don Rodgers is the vice president of consulting with First Pioneer Farm Credit, ACA. During his 18 years with Farm Credit, Rodgers has helped more than 1,500 farm families meet their personal and business goals. In addition to stressing common sense and "people management," Rodgers shows his clients how to solve their own problems through team building and planning. He offers his clients creative solutions in budgeting, accounting records, income tax management strategies, and employee management.

The cost of the seminar is $125 per person and includes reference materials, lunch, parking, and speaker fees. There is also an alumni roundtable the night before where you can have dinner and informally discuss agriculture with the instructors.

The deadline for registration is Jan. 17. For more information, contact Jim Shirk, agriculture services manager of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry, at (717) 397-3531.

The evening will feature Mr. Steve Larson, Editor of Hoard's Dairyman, and past President of Dairy Shrine, as the main speaker. Mr. Larson has been with Hoard's Dairyman since 1969. As Senior Associate Editor, he contributes regularly to the Editorial commentary and oversees several regular departments and areas of coverage in the magazine, including feeding and nutrition, buildings and equipment, financial strategy, DHIA affairs and general dairy farm operation. Each winter he coordinates the magazine's popular Round Table series and works with the 530-acre Hoard's Dairyman Farm which has a 100-cow registered Guernsey herd. He has also served on advisory committees for the Upper Midwest Dairy Industry, Wisconsin Center for Dairy Profitability, Western Large Herd Management Conference, and the U.S. Dairy Forage Research Center. He has a weekly commentary on Dairyline, a nationally syndicated radio program. He also is a director and past president of National Dairy Shrine. Maryland Young Couple Proving You Can Make It Farming

George Donnon has developed a nice Holstein herd from scratch. Hard work and patience are the keys to success.

going to make it. And they love their cows and calves. They know each animal's personality and take great pleasure when one of their calves grows up to be a milk cow in their herd.

They believe tame animals respond in greater milk production, and in better herd health too. Cows are not overly pushed for high production. An old cow that is still in good shape is cherished more than a burned out two-year-old with a championship record.

Calving intervals average 12.9 months, and some cows often calve on the same day each year. They believe you need this kind of good herd management to survive.

What would they tell other young people who want to go into farming?

"Follow your dreams," they say. "Don't let anyone tell you you can't make it. If it's in your head, you are going to do it.

"Yes, it takes a lot of patience, and it is a long term thing. You will not see a turn-over for five or six years, and you will be cash poor and equity rich.

"'No money, honey,' will be said a lot. And you can't expect to start at the top. But if you watch your debt load, you can make it."

For winning the prestigious young farmer award, the Donnons won some cash awards from Dodge and Safemark. And they get to go to Nashville and Denver for national conventions. But when all the hoopla is over, this farm couple will return to their Cecil County farm with just one thing in mind.

"I knew I wanted to farm for a long time, but people said we couldn't make it," George said. "On the other hand a lot of people have helped us along the way. I just want to prove a young farm family really can make it farming with patience and working together as a team."

Hormones Can Improve Reproduction Efficiency

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — In looking over the University of Delaware's dairy herd records or those of Delaware dairy farmers, I note that the statistics on dairy cows leave much to be desired.

While there are several parameters for diagnosing this situation quickly and precisely for each cow, the causes for reproductive efficiency are many and not always obvious or easily corrected.

Production levels, feeding and management skills also are involved.

Age at first calving should be no more than 24 months or something is wrong with the way the heifers are raised and when and how they are bred.

The interval between calvings should be no more than 12. months or something is wrong with the after-calving cleaning of the cows, heat detection and breeding. The exception may be that milk production levels are so high, even after 10 months of milking, that an extended lactation and no drying-up at 60 or 70 pounds milk is preferred.

State DHIA data reveal that some Delaware cows have a calving interval of much more than 12.5 months, and herd averages show several herds above the 12.5-month calving interval. The average calving interval nationally is 14 months (138 days).

Studies have identified the cost of greater calving interval beyond 100 days (12.5 months) to be about $3 per day. This means that dairy farmers with a calving interval of 138 days are losing $3x38=$114 per cow per year.

Other studies have shown that one-third of the average dairy herd has had no estrus or heat detected within 30 days after calving. Normally a cow should have the first heat at 15 to 20 days after calving and the second heat at 30 to 35 days after calving.

If a cow has calving difficulty — including twins, retained afterbirth, metritis, milk fever, ketosis and cystic ovaries — she will likely be delayed with her first heat after calving and is a good bet for increased calving interval.

If you hope to succeed with breeding either heifers or cows, you must rely on successful heat detection. There are means to orchestrate heat occurrence rather than wait forever for it and possibly miss it.

Understanding endocrinology has given us powerful means within the veterinary "tool chest," specifically hormone therapy. Hormone therapy also would be the prime treatment for those difficult cows that you want to bring back in line to normal reproductive efficiency.

Hormone treatments are not that costly compared to the loss of possibly $114 per cow per year as shown in the formula above. Two major products now on the market are gonadotropin releasing hormone (Gn-RH) and prostaglandin (PGF2alpha), which cost $6 or $3 per dose, respectively.

These hormones can be adminstered successfully in several ways, but which is the more profitable? Studies at Kansas and Wisconsin have identified five regimen.

The first treatment regimen is 100 microgram Gn-RH one time at 10 to 14 days after calving, which brings cows earlier into heat and reduces cystic ovaries, but cows with metritis are not good candidates. Reduction in

Berks Sets Dairy Day

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The annual Berks County dairy day educational event is scheduled to be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Jan. 9, at the Berks County Agricultural Center, located north of Reading Airport, along Rt. 183.

The cost of the program is $4 which includes lunch and handouts.

Reservations can be made by sending a check made payable to: Berks County Extension Special Account. Send the check to Berks County Cooperative Extension, Berks County Ag Center, P.O. Box 520, Leesport, PA 19533.

The same program is being offered first, Jan. 7, in Bucks and Montgomery counties and those interested should call Mike Fournier, extension agent, at (215) 345-3283, for details on the program there.

The program is also scheduled to be held Jan. 8 in Chester County. Those interested in attending that program should contact Cheryl Fairbairn at (610) 696-3500.

The agenda for this year's program includes an update on farm research on flies and grazing; fine tuning rations using test results of milk urea nitrogen; dealing with heifer mastitis; reviewing new technologies in mastitis control; reducing feed costs with alternative feeds; and a panel discussion about attacking subclinical mastitis.

Program participants at Berks County include Dr. Arlyn "Jud" Heinrichs, with Penn State University; Ralph Moyer, a Bethel Township dairy farmer; Dr. David Nirschl, veterinarian; David Schuler, a dairy farmer in Richmond Township; and Dr. Lorraine Soridillo, also with Penn State University.

Hormones Can Improve

numbers of days-open was 43 to 48 days; this can represent a savings of up to $144 per cow.

The second treatment is 25 milligram PGF2alpha one time at 14 to 28 days after calving, which helps reduce uterine infections and metritis. Reduction in numbers of days-open was again 43 to 48 days, representing up to $144 per cow savings.

The third treatment is repeat 25 millgram PGF2alpha every two weeks beginning at 28 days after calving and ending at 90 days, which brings cows back into regular cycling earlier, reduces infections and cystic ovaries and brings more cows back into heat at the same time. Reduction in numbers of days-open was 21 days, representing a savings of $63 per cow.

The fourth treatment is 100 microgram Gn-RH aimed at detection and treatment of cystic ovaries about 30 to 90 days after calving, followed by 25 milligram PGF2alpha, which causes heat and a reduction of days-open of 17 to 24 days — a savings of $51 to $72.

The fifth treatment is aimed at better heat detection in cows, not heifers, at any time with 100 microgram Gn-RH, seven days later 35 milligram PGF2alpha, 32 hours later a second injection of Gn-RH, and the cows are bred by artificial insemination 18 hours after that. The reduction of numbers of days-open was 23 days, at a savings of $69 per cow.

It is possible that the use of one of these treatment regimen could help overcome the particular causes of long calving intervals on your farm, making your dairy herd more profitable.

MMI Redeems Member Equity

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Milk Marketing Inc., a dairy cooperative owned by 9,000 farmers in 11 states, redeemed a total of $4.5 million in equity to member-farmers in December.

This represents a portion of the investment and commitment members made in their dairy cooperative.

Don Schriver, MMI's executive vice president and chief executive officer announced the news in a letter to MMI members today.

Schriver said, "The cooperative is proud of its track record of redeeming equity to members. Your board and staff will continue to work diligently to maintain MMI's financial strength."

MMI marketed and processed nearly 7 billion pounds of milk for the 1996 fiscal year, and had revenues surpassing $1.1 billion. Earnings, or "patron savings," jumped from $5.5 million in fiscal 1995 to $7.2 million in fiscal 1996.

PENNSYLVANIA LICA

Organic Dairy Co-op

dairy animals receiving certification for organic milk production.

The cooperative allows a transition feeding program for new and certifiable dairy herds. For nine months, a "significant" portion of the daily ration must consist of certifiably organically grown feed. Then for the 90 days prior to certification for organic milk sales, the feed must be 100 percent certified organic.

While producing milk and abstaining from the use of antibiotics and breeding and production hormones, including oxytocin (for milk let-down), could be considered financially risky business practices for those who can't afford the loss in production of milk or replacement animals, it is part of the mainstay of the CROPP organization.

In a letter from Fiscus, he stated, "... the standards which have arise in (CROPP) membership requirements and testing have been established by the consumer.

"An example of this consumer-oriented quality control is seen in the prohibition of antibiotic use on these dairies.

"This is not a requirement of most organic certification agencies nationwide, and probably will not be a requirement of the national standards which will be implemented by the USDA in the near future.

"The prohibition of antibiotics and hormones (breeding and lactation) came about in CROPP herds because the people buying the milk were primarily concerned about antibiotic residues in milk in addition to the media alarm about (BST)."

"Consumers that want milk with these qualities are willing to pay the premium prices which these practices require on the farm, and then some."

Hoover said maintaining the antibiotic prohibition has not proven to be a problem for him, since he had been drifting toward production with as few purchased inputs as possible.

He said he had virtually stopped using many of the inputs anyway, when he first heard of CROPP during the 1980s. He said he drifted away from using as much fertilizer after he compared the local land-grant university extension recommendations and found they were about half of what his fertilizer cooperative was recommending for his farm.

About that time, he had also had a bad experience with retained herbicidal activity on an alfalfa crop.

What happened was that he sprayed an herbicide on corn and then drought set in. "I cut the corn early, and put in alfalfa," Hoover said. "The spray didn't affect the weeds, but it damaged the alfalfa.

"My concerns were that I felt I would raise better alfalfa with no spray," Hoover said.

About 1988, he quit using the services of the fertilizer cooperative,, though he continues soil testing.

About the same time, he heard about CROPP.

"I saw an article in the newspaper that they were beginning to sell organic milk, but CROPP was about three hours away, so it wasn't feasible (to ship milk there)."

Then, in late 1993, Hoover attended a CROPP informational meeting and saw that he met most of the qualifications for raising the organic milk.

About the beginning of 1994, he decided to join CROPP and he got certified in March through the OCIA.

At first, CROPP provided Hoover with a list of organic feed suppliers, though later he got an expanded list from OCIA.

He buys all his grain and protein products and he is linked in with about four local organic feed cash crop farmers who supply his needs.

Every year he has to be recertified and inspected. If there are no problems, there is one inspection. Problems can result in additional inspections.

However, CROPP has a different inspection system than what applies in general to the average dairy producer. The average producer doesn't really have an effective appeal process comparatively.

In the CROPP system, there is the organic inspector who reports to a review committee, the farmer reports to the review committee and the farmer works with the inspector.

Both Fiscus and Hoover said the arrangement prevents inspectors from carrying to much unchecked authority.

Hoover said that initial inspection fee for OCIA is about $125 and they get a percent out of the sales, based on an income-derived sliding scale fee.

Member-farmers of CROPP are all self-bonded and use certificates of deposit (CDs) for collateral that are in the farmer's name and the cooperative's name. The cooperative uses that as collateral.

In a more recent letter, Fiscus stated, "Joining our cooperative truly means that you become an onwer and we now work for you.

"In order for the cooperative to deliver the service you need as a member/landowner, we need you to make a commitment to the co-op both financially and, more importantly to cooperative marketing.

"There are two investment requirements in our cooperative which all members satisfy. These investments help the cooperative to finance part of the growth that each new farmer creates.

"The first investment is called a capital base plan, which is an entry level investment based on the projected hundredweights to be sold in the coming year.

"This investment is handled uniquely by CROPP in that your investment is in the form of a certificate of deposit in your name and the cooperative's name, which is placed in an agreed-upon bank.

"You receive the interest and, if you leave the cooperative, the CD is released.

"We allow producers in new regions six months to satisfy the capital base plan requirement, which gives them time to repay their initial feed investment and to establish a relationship of integrity with CROPP."

A second investment required for CROPP membership is a 25 cents per cwt. contribution which goes into a revolving loan fund, use to finance the co-op's inventory.

"This 25 cents is automatically credited to your revolving fund account and is in addition to your cash pay price," he said. "This amounts to an extra 25 cents over and above your cash pay price."

Fiscus said that actually seeing CROPP sell its locally produced Organic Valley label milk products in mainstream groceries in the Mid-Atlantic states is months, if not more than a year away, but farmers in southern Pennsylvania and Maryland are being sought now to build a production base.

Once producers and processors and retailers are in line, the engine of supply and demand for this product can begin to work.

Since it may take up to almost two years to become certified organic, Fiscus said he needs to know of interest soon so he can help producers start getting on line with what they need to do.

One thing he said is guaranteed is the the base pay price for mid-Atlantic CROPP farmers would be 75 cents per cwt. above the usual CROPP pay price.

"When the conventional milk price climbs to within $3 of the then-current organic pay price, the organic price will climb accordingly to maintain a $3 minimum premium," he stated. "The conventional milk price for this pool will be defined as the Federal Order No. 2 published blend price for your zone."

Pay is based on component values, which are determined on the overall values of each component as determined by the products produced for the entire cooperative.

Fiscus said he will be making farm visits to help farmers who have not yet begun to prepare for certification as organic producers.

He said it should be easier to get certified now, rather than later, basically because the federal government hasn't yet become too involved.

Hoover said that, as far as he's concerned, "If I consider my milk market to the conventional market, mine is real stable."

Ken and Denise Sanner often hold picnics, hayrides, and holiday gatherings for the Jaycees on their farm. They find fellow Jaycees are fascinated with the behind-the-scenes dairy operation and are full of questions. "It's good advertisement and a tremendous opportunity to open your farm to the non-farming community," Denise said.

The Sanners, ADC's Outstanding Young Cooperative Couple, review information they received at the National Milk Producers Federation annual meeting. "It's a great opportunity and amazing what you can learn," said Ken. "I always read a lot to better my operation, but you learn more talking with people across the country."

Successful Farming Includes Community Education, Involvement

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — A free trip to California changed Denise and Ken Sanner's focus.

Although the Sanners, ADC's Outstanding Young Cooperative Couple, were intent on farming successfully before the trip to the National Milk Producers Federation annual meeting and still are, they have redefined what that means.

Now, not only do they want to improve farm management practices but also they see the necessity to educate the non-farming community about agriculture. The couple realize that it's the public's perception of the farmer that is going to affect each farmer's future.

Ken plans to become involved in the political scene and Denise in county dairy promotion.

"No one is looking out for the farmer except the farmer himself. We (farmers) make up less than .7 of one percent of the population," Ken said of his determination to not only become involved locally but also to establish dialogue with Washington's bureaucrats.

Denise, who became acquainted with farming only when she married Ken four years ago, is enthusiastic about how much her understanding of the dairy industry expanded during the five-day session.

"It was a whole learning experience for me. I have a better appreciation for what my husband is doing because I can see the whole scope of the the dairy industry not just our own," she said.

Denise, who has worked as an executive secretary for 16 years, is pursuing part time employment so that she can become more involved in farming.

Although Denise helps with the calves and has run the barn scraper, she confides, "My husband's big joke when he talks about me running the barn cleaner is that maybe the next time I can get it out of first gear."

Farming is no "mom and pop" operation on the Sanner's Kutztown farm. With 390-acres to farm and 89 Holsteins to milk plus replacements, the couple rely heavily on full-time employee Jeremy Gehringer and part-time employees Monte Schroeder and Ken's dad Ralph whenever they need time off for cooperative responsibilities.

"If it wasn't for them, especially my dad filling in for me, we couldn't attend sessions like the one in California," Ken said.

Although Ken owns the cattle and equipment, he continues to rent two farms from his dad.

"I'm glad I have the opportunity to farm," Ken said of his parents' foresight in encouraging him to save the money he received for doing chores while growing up."

From the money saved during those early years and of the profits he continued to make from agriculture projects, Ken gradually purchased cows and equipment. For about nine years, Ken and his dad worked in partnership together, but four years ago, Ken officially took over the farming operation.

The free-stall barn originally was a big chicken house and now has a maze of buildings attached to it.

The Sanners are installing new stalls to improve what they have to work with.

"We are maxed out with the facilities that we have here. We'd like to have better facilities here," Ken said, "but I never felt comfortable building a new set up to go into that kind of debt."

Last year, Ken switched feeding practices to total mixed rations to increase production from cows.

"I didn't see the increase in production that I had hoped because we had some other problems," Ken said.

The problem was last year's corn silage didn't have the nutritional value needed because of dry weather.

"It's imperative to grow the highest quality forages for feed," Ken said of his efforts to harvest at the right time.

Last month Ken has seen a slight increase in milk production at 20,000 pounds, 790 fat and 6.6 protein, which he attributes to better forages. He hopes to reach 23,000-pound herd average within five years.

Ken considers himself lucky in that he equally enjoys milking cows and crop work.

"It always amazes me that he could spend 16 hours in the fields, and then come in and work in the garden," Denise said.

The Sanners are slowly updating existing facilities at the barn that was once a chicken house and has been added to repeatedly.

around the farm buildings, pool, and the couple's double farmhouse, which is also home for their full-time hired man and his family.

Coming from a non-agricultural background, Denise said that the biggest adjustment as a farm wife was the commitment farming requires. "It's a seven day a week job that requires total commitment of time and personal attention," she said.

Denise, who does some of the bookwork, looks forward to cutting back on her off-farm hours to ease her husband's load.

After their term as ADC's Outstanding Young Couples ends, the Sanners will become the National Milk Young Cooperative Couple and will spend three days in Washington D.C. to plan the sessions, which will be held in Orlando next year.

The YF program trains couples for leadership. And the Sanners anticipate eventually becoming directors for ADC.

The Sanners are convinced that the cooperative is the best way to go for dairy farmers.

"Some independents might offer a few cents more, but the farmers who select them aren't looking at the long-term scale. Coops do more to benefit the farmer by advertising and research. Unfortunately times are tough and every nickle and dime means something," Ken said of a farmer's tendancy to look at short-term rather than long-term benefits.

He believes that it's through research that more dairy products will be developed to entice consumers to buy. "This business is driven by supply and demand and we must build more demand by offering new products."

While on-farm operations change over the years, off the farm families are changing to, the couple noted. At the National Milk Producers meeting, they learned that more than 50 percent of the food in the U.S. is sold in restaurants and convenience stores.

"We (the dairy industry) must learn how to fit into the whole scheme of things by coming up with packaged (ready-to-eat) dairy products," Ken said.

"We must get out there and promote our product," Denise said.

The Sanners believe that other young couples should get involved in the programs offered by cooperatives. The young cooperator program is open to members between the ages of 21 and 40.

"It's a great opportunity and amazing what you can learn," said Ken. "I always read a lot to better my operation, but you learn more talking with people across the country."

Denise said that some young couples are afraid to try out for the young cooperative program because they hear you must give an impromptu speech.

"It really isn't as bad as you think. You can select the topic you want to talk about. For myself, I sort of lucked out because one of the questions dealt with route reorganization in milk hauling."

It was a topic that Denise was familiar with because she had been talking with a woman who shared first-hand experiences about it.

"I told Ken that we must select that topic because it was the only one I knew much about. The Sanners used the experiences, which the woman had related, as part of the impromptu speech. They stressed the importance of accepting that change is inevitable and that people must look to the future and the reasons behind change to see the overall picture.

From the impromptu speech and their application, the Sanners were selected as the Outstanding Young Cooperative Couple.

"I think it is important to focus on the positive. You can't have a negative attitude, if you want to succeed in the business," Ken said.

While the Sanners vision to educate the non-farming community was honed at the convention, it wasn't that the Sanners haven't been promoting the dairy industry in their community. Both, Ken and Denise are active in different Jaycee Chapters and often hold joint picnics, hayrides, and holiday gatherings for the organization on their farm. They find fellow Jaycees are fascinated with the behind-the-scenes dairy operation and are full of questions.

"This is the time that we can educate our friends when they complain about smells," Denise said. "It's good advertisement and a tremendous opportunity to open your farm to the non-farming community. Not only do we tell our visitors about farming but also we find that they repeat it to their friends."

The Sanners are also in charge of the Philadelphia Zoo Committee in which young cooperative couples take turns going to the zoo every Sunday during the summer to milk the cow on display and answer questions that zoo visitors have about farming. Through this experience they find that for the most part people are curious about farming and do not have negative attitudes toward the farming community.

"Understanding goes a long way. If they understand a little, they are more accepting of things they don't understand," Ken said of the necessity of educating the non-farming community.

The Sanner's farm has also been host to several school groups. Denise would like to open their farm more often to tour groups, especially to the county's farm-city tour.

Ken is also a member of the Kutztown Young Farmers and is a delegate to Sire Power and a member of the DHIA board. For some additional income, Ken sells Beachley Hardy Hytest Brand Seeds.

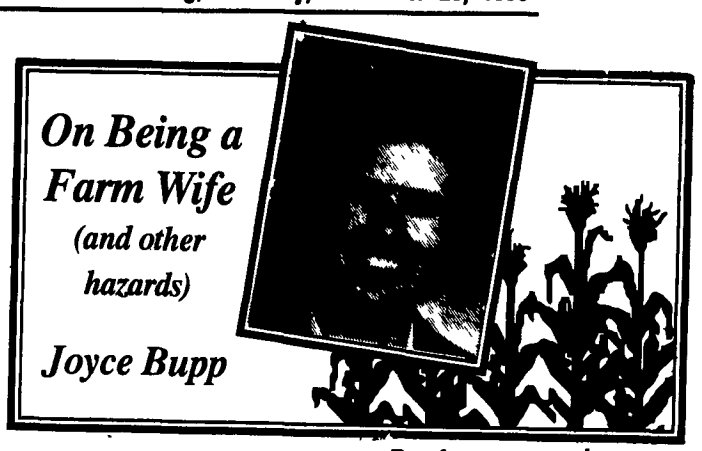
DEALER INQUIRIES WELCOME



Company coming. Bills to pay. Kids home from school ... bored already. Need to clean. Need to cook. Need to shop. Need to drop?

Need a nap!

Hectic holidays got you overwrought? Trying to pack a year's worth of catching up, visiting, celebrating into this brief, busiest-of-celebrations week in the year? And meanwhile, all the usual stuff needs done as well.

Whoa. Hold it. Slow down. Today is the first day of the rest of your life. Yeah, I know we've heard that phrase so much we're sick of it. But ... think about it.

Two chain-jerker incidents have happened in my life recently. You know, those things that come along, yank us from the daily routines and remind us to take each day for granted.

Barely two months ago, my only sister, in apparent excellent health, underwent a routine health physicial for her job. A routine blood test stirred questions; a second brought her family the devastating news that she had a nearly-always-fatal form of leukemia.

Just a few weeks later, she died. It was the second cancer death in my immediate family in 13 months; we lost my dad to another form of disease last fall.

About the same time, I traveled to the upper edge of the Chesapeake Bay to do a newspaper story on 11-year-old Ben Keyes. He and his family are dairy farmers on a historic farm just a stone's throw from the town of Havre de Grace.

Ben is one cool kid. He loves the farm, especially tractors. He's a 4-H member and owns a couple of his own heifers which he has shown at local fairs. He used to spend a lot of time playing sports and riding his bike around the farm.

Now Ben rides a "Gator" around the Keyes' farm, a small John Deere, six-wheeled cross between a golf-cart and a mini pickup truck. The day I visited, Ben toured me around the farm on the Gator, along with his constant buddy, Bailey, the chocolate lab with the ever-wagging tail.

See, Ben has cancer. He found out about a year ago, after he fell in the school gym playing soccer and banged his knee. The knee swelled up over a period of several weeks and, just before Christmas last year, was found to be cancerous. Since then, Ben has had nearly a dozen surgeries at Johns Hopkins. During one of the, last June, his doctors amputated his left leg above the knee.

It's slowed Ben down a bit — but hasn't stopped him. He's figured out how to play a little bit of soccer. With an artificial leg and on crutches.

Just before Christmas — this year — Ben had yet another round of cancer surgery. This time, the doctors operated on his lungs. Knowing Ben, he's probably back out on that Gator — or at least hounding his parents to let him be.

Ben has become my inspiration. His picture hangs above my computer. On those days when the bills roll in, the cows break out, milk price drops, and the mud in the pastures swell 'til we wonder if we should be building an Ark, I look up there, above the monitor, and sure enough, there's Ben ... grinning at me from a newspaper clipping.

Stressed? Yeah, we all surely are stressed in these days of too much to do in too little time.

But, stressed spelled backwards is "desserts." That's to be my motto for 1997. For, when a young man like Ben Keyes can take all the stresses he's dealth with and still find some desserts in life, it becomes an inspiration to those of us who get all steamed over much less critical problems.

So, chill out. And Happy New Year, y'all.

And especially, Happy New Year, Ben!

Note: Ben loves to get mail. You can drop him a card at 2028 Level Road, Havre de Grace, MD 21078.

This Year It Will Be Different

With 1997 just three days away, you may be pressured to come up with some profound New Year's Resolutions. I admit, I'm not one to religiously select a resolution for some life-changing routine each year. But last year, I did jot down three tasks that I wanted to accomplish during the year. They were "Should do" things that I kept procrastinating on. I am pleased to report that at least one of the three was completed and another is in progress. (After all, I still have three days in 1996, don't I?)

Having the goals written down and taped to my date book helped me to actually follow through. Take a few minutes this weekend to think about the approaching year. What important tasks have you been putting off? List them.

Stephen Covey, author of Seven Habits of Highly Effective People and First Things First, sees people being overwhelmed with "urgent" tasks even when they are not classified as "important." But they fail to pay attention to the long-term important tasks that aren't currently "urgent" — tasks like planning, maintenance work, time for personal development, and on-going energy to sustain and improve relationships.

How are you doing with those type of tasks? Are they the things on your list? Why not pick one or two to accomplish this year? Schedule time for them early in the year. Write them down. Make the necessary phone calls or appointments to get started by February 1.

If you are having trouble getting started, here are some ideas to consider:

✔ Meet with an attorney to draw up a will. Or review the will you have in place.

✔ Go on at least three "dates" with your spouse during the year.

✔ Install a smoke detector on each floor of your home. If you have one, check the batteries. Check the batteries in your flashlights, too. Replace them if necessary.

✔ Label and put in albums two packs of pictures.

✔ Arrange for automatic monthly withdrawals from your checking account to a separate savings/investment account.

✔ Write a letter to a distant relative to update him/her on your family news.

✔ Throw out one garbage bag full of stuff from your attic or basement.

✔ Take some photos of your youngest child (there's never enough of them).

✔ Call up a friend that you haven't spoken to this past year. Set a date for coffee or lunch.

✔ Compost your Christmas tree.

✔ Clean out your refrigerator, or clean your oven.

✔ Comparison shop for insurance. Call two other insurance companies and get quotes for policies similar to the coverage you have now. Compare the costs and choose the best option.

✔ Sort through your closets and dresser drawers. Take one bag (or more) of clothing to the Goodwill, Salvation Army or other charity clothing store.

✔ Take a walk outdoors at least once each week.

✔ Purchase a license for your pet.

✔ Contact Social Security and check your estimated benefits, or contact TRW and request a free credit report.

✔ Share a meal with all your family members at least once each week.

✔ Read one novel this year, just for pleasure.

These are just a few doable resolutions that will truly make 1997 different from this past year. Don't waste your time dreaming up unrealistic plans that can't be fulfilled. Instead choose specific tasks that you can accomplish that will improve your family's life.

Rural Men Outlive Urban, Suburban Peers

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — People who are wealthy and wise are generally expected to be more healthy, but rural men may hold an extra card that promises longevity: strong ties to friends, neighbors and family. When men with similar characteristics are compared, rural men live longer than either urban or suburban men.

The Penn State study could not specifically identify why rural men live longer. However, McLaughlin says, "Those in rural communities may benefit from social networks made up of strong ties: longtime friends, neighbors and siblings. Those are the people who would be most likely to provide consistent and long-term social support and assistance."

The study was based on the National Longitudinal Study of Older Men from 1966 to 1990. Partial support for this research was furnished by the National Institute on Aging and the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

Something Fishy On New Year's Day?

The New Year's celebration punctuates the end of the holiday season. Many people are looking for fresh ideas for hors d'oeuvres. Why not serve seafood?

Whether you're having a big party or a small buffet, you can serve a diverse selection of appetizers, soups, and finger foods made from seafood.

Remember, some of the simplest dishes are also the tastiest. And many, such as cold spreads and dips can be prepared ahead of time.

Most of the seafood recipes included in this column are tested by Fay Strickler, Berks County Extension home economist.

When Cutting Firewood For Your Home

Trees in your woodlot differ in their 'economic' value. One tree type may have value as firewood and as wildlife habitat. While it may not be good for lumber for construction or furniture material. Cutting the best 'straight' trees for firewood reduces the supply of trees used for lumber. Straight trees are easier to split but crooked, limby ones have less value as high quality lumber.

Tree species make a difference when selecting tree for firewood. For example red oak, white oak, black cherry, and white ash often bring higher timber prices. It makes sense to avoid cutting good lumbering species for firewood. They'll be worth more if left to grow to sawlog size.

Something else to consider before removing a tree for firewood is its value to wildlife. Although dead, dying, injured, or malformed trees have low timber value, they're more valuable to wildlife. For example, these trees often provide a food source for insect-eating birds such as woodpeckers. Cavity trees and trees with large spreading limbs provide nest sites and dens for many types of wildlife.

Wildlife that inhabits a woodlot is also linked to the types of trees. To maintain wildlife diversity, cut the species of trees that are the most abundant.

When you remove trees for firewood, you also influence the spacing and arrangement of trees in the forest. What will the area look like after certain trees are cut? For example, by cutting trees in a single area, you can make an opening for a campsite, picnic or recreation area.

Here's a quick list of trees based on their 'highest' value or benefit. Trees having the 'highest' value as saw timber include black cherry, white ash, red oak, and white oak. Trees highest in firewood value include white ash, sugar maple, American beech, red oak, white oak, black oak, scarlet oak, chestnut oak, hickory, dogwood and black locust. Tree species having the highest in wildlife value include black cherry, American beech, red oak, white oak, black oak, scarlet oak, chestnut oak, hickory, black gum, white pine and dogwood.

"Uninvited guests can hitchhike on firewood into the home. Nuts, acorns, greens and pine cones may harbor flies, seed-infesting chalcid wasps and beetles," according to Dewey Caron, Extension Entomologist at the University of Delaware. Ants, spiders, wood-boring beetles, cockroaches and millipedges may find there way into your home. Firewood may also hide nuisance pests like lady beetles, boxelder bugs, crickets and paper wasps.

Fortunately, most of these are easy to remove without chemical control. To prevent insects from entering your home via firewood, thoroughly inspect the firewood, vacuum up invaders and dispose of the bag immediately. To prevent infestations, do not store large quantities of firewood indoors. An outdoor porch that's cool and open is preferred. Store enough firewood indoors to last a couple of days.

Carbon advised never treating firewood you intect to burn with chemicals. The fumes may be harmful if inhaled. Lastly, never burn pressure treated wood products indoors.

Any questions regarding the above article can be addresed to Tom Becker, Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-7408.

Helping Others And Acting Wraps Up The Season

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KIRKWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — Like many people during the holiday season, Loren Hershey is a busy fellow. But he still found some time to help others this season.

Loren, his siblings, and several friends spent an afternoon at the Water Street Rescue Mission wrapping presents for children whose parents can't afford to buy them presents.

Most of the time Loren helps on the family farm, does his school work and performs in a Christmas play.

While many other 11-year-olds participate in Christmas plays, Loren's involvement in playing a shepherd and Nathan the stable boy is a bit more time consuming than most.

He participates in a play called Miracle of Christmas, held at Sight and Sound Auditorium, the largest professional Christian Theatre Company in the nation. Showings are held five days a week, sometimes as often as four times daily.

Loren only participates in about eight shows a week because he and four other fellows take turns playing the same role in the show.

In the role of the stable boy, Loren has about 15 lines to say. A mike is concealed beneath his headpiece.

He needs to change outfits three times during each performance. "The one outfit is wool and it gets really hot," Loren said.

According to Loren about 80 people participate in each show, which lasts about two hours and 10 minutes.

"I love it," Loren said of his part in the show that began in November 1 and plays through the second week in January.

His participation in the play happened as sort of a fluke. Because he is homeschooled, his mother thought it would be a good idea for him to learn first-hand what it's like to have a job interview. When they heard that children's roles were available in the upcoming show, Loren applied for a position and to his surprise was hired.

He likes acting so much that he'd like to try out for the next show produced by Sight and Sound. But his mother said, one time is enough because each day he participates in a show, she must drive him about 30 minutes each way between their farm and the Strasburg show.

On the Hershey farm, the family fattens beef cattle, about 400 annually on 150 acres. Loren and his two brothers and a sister also raise market lambs, hogs, and steers for 4-H projects.

The Neffs and the Hersheys wrap presents to be distributed to children in need at the Water Street Rescue Mission. Shown are Lois Hershey with her children Loren, 11; Linford, 9, and Lisa, 7. The children of Barry and Sandy Neff of Quarryville include Eric, 13; Heidi, 12; Tyler, 10; and Jared, 8.

Loren Hershey acts in a Christmas production for Sight and Sound Entertainment Centre, the largest professional Christian theater in the nation.

Their friends, the Neff family, who helped wrap presents for the Hersheys milk 55 cows and raise 75,000 broilers on their farm.

Why is popcorn harder than sweet corn?
Because there's more starch and less water in popcorn kernels than in that soft, juicy, eat-it-off-the-cob sweet corn.
Starch is a chemical combination of sugar molecules joined together in long chains. There are two kinds of starches. One is a hard starch, and the other's soft.
Dent corn — that's the kind of corn often used to feed livestock — has a dent at the top of every kernel. The dip is caused by uneven drying of the hard and soft starches inside each little yellow nugget.
Flint corn, like the colorful Indian corn and popcorn, hardly have any soft starch at all. The hard starch dries evenly, so there's no depression in each kernel.
Other kinds of corn have mostly soft starch Our scientist friends call them flour corn because the soft kernels are easy to grind up and use for all sorts of foods, like tortillas. And sweet corn? It stays soft because it's full of water, and the sugar inside each kernel doesn't make starch until after it's picked. (That's why fresh-picked sweet corn is sweeter than three-day-old sweet corn)
People talk a lot about getting enough carbohydrates in your diet Carbohydrates is a just fancy name for starch and sugar — and corn is a great source, no matter what kind you eat!
Scientifically yours,

'Why I Love Pizza'

Sonia Rozelle, the Broome County Dairy Princess in New York, writes that she has been busy promoting the dairy industry through a variety of events. Her latest project was a "Why I Love Pizza" essay contest for eight and nine year olds.

Top winners in the "I Love Pizza Contest" held in New York are Matt Hand and Jessica Kellicut. Second-place winners are Sabrina Crissey of Binghampton, N.Y. and Christina Washburn of Johnson City, N.Y. Third-place winners are Vanessa Ralph of Castle Creek, N.Y., and Kare Humphry of Binghampton, N.Y. Runner-up was Robin Cooper of Glen Aubrey, N.Y.

Here are the top two winning entries.

WHY I LOVE PIZZA
Matt Hand
Lisle, N.Y.
9 Years Old

The reason I love pizza is that it tastes great. My favorite part of the pizza is the crust because it's crunchy and tasty. I like to add pepperoni to the top. I also like cheese on top that is very thick because it makes it very chewy. I also love pizza because we always have it at parties and for supper on Friday nights. My mom hates to cook on Friday nights, so this gives her a break. I LOVE PIZZA!!!

WHY I LOVE PIZZA
Jessica Kellicutt
Lisle, N.Y.
8 Years Old

I like the REAL CHEESE on pizza. I like the real crunchy crust. I like the cheese best. I really, really love pizza because I like sauce, crust, and best of all I like the CHEESE! Now that's PIZZA, so that's why I love pizza!

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

We are about to start a new year! It is a time to reflect on the past and plan for the future.

Our church has published a booklet on the "Hallelujah" moments of some of its members. There are moments in all of our lives when we want to shout "Hallelujah." Other times, we only realize later what an important moment we just had.

By reading these pages we get to know other folks better as we share in their lives. Some tell of experiences with health problems, family problems and being close to nature.

Recently, I was hunting a small book but I could not locate it even though I was sure that it was in our bookcase. So, I began to remove some of the old books. And, I do mean old ones as many were school books from 1850s, 1870s and 1890s. Geography maps in those books do not look like today's maps. The illustrations in history books were very unusual too.

One book that interested me was my grandmother's dictionary printed in 1859. I'm told that she was the only pupil in the school who owned a dictionary. In this book is a small piece of lace, a snip of blond hair, some foil and pressed clover leaves.

Often the scraps of paper in old books are more interesting than the books themselves. Yes, I found the small book. It is only two inches by three inches — no wonder it was lost.

Cedar Crest Participates In National Marketing Activity

The Cedar Crest FFA Chapter is participating in the National FFA Organization's Commodity Marketing Activity.

The Commodity Marketing Activity is an integrated classroom and real-life activity that helps students gain a realistic commodity marketing experience. Teams of students are given a model farm with corn, soybeans, wheat, soybean meal, cattle, hogs, cotton, orange juice and sugar.

Team members decide when to buy and sell these products to achieve the greatest economic gain. Orders are called to a commodity broker and the trade is recorded. Real prices and market conditions are experienced but no money is exchanged. Each FFA chapter may have up to six teams each consisting of 3-6 members.

The team, which earns the highest combined total in trading and test scores, will receive a state winner plaque and a $100 or $300 scholarship to be divided among team members depending on the number of teams participating from each state.

The Commodity Marketing Activity is sponsored by the Steward-Peterson Advisory Group, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, and Data Transmission Network Corporation as a special project of the National FFA Foundation, Inc.

Livestock Team Wraps Up Memorable Year

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Members of the York County Livestock Judging team had to do a lot of explaining this year.

And all that explaining, perhaps better known as "giving oral reasons," earned them a third-place overall spot at the national contest in Louisville Kentucky.

Team members are Shanna Daugherty, York; Heather Jasienski, Felton; Adam Sellers, Thomasville; and Matt Trostle, Red Lion. Coach is John Eaton, assisted by Melissa Trostle and Chad Cash.

York County's livestock judging teams have compiled a lengthy history of outstanding performance at the junior competitions, from the local ones held with other counties to high-powered national finals. This year's team upheld that traditions of accomplishment, with outstanding performances at regional contests in four states to the third-place finish out of 35 teams and 136 individuals competing at the North American International Livestock Exhibition, held at Louisville in late November.

"But this was their last contest," acknowledges John Eaton, former York 4-H livestock exhibitor and judge. "Once a team wins at the state level, that's the last they can compete."

According to Eaton, the judging is based on how the structure of the animals in the classes relate to the needs of the meats and breeding industries. Ten classes of livestock were included, with four head per class. Four classes were of beef and three each of hogs and sheep. All breeding classes included information on performance data.

Four classes of oral reasons were given, testing both memory of the classes and ability to verbally justify the class placings. Also included in the contest were two clases of questions on information on which competitors could initially take notes and then be tested on the date in written form.

In addition to placing third nationally as a team members scored well as individuals. Shanna Daughterty was ranked 11th in the national judging, Matt Trostle finished 15th, and Adam Sellers took 18th placing. Trostle was also ranked 12th overall in reasons.

The team finished in fifth place in the beef portion of the judging, with Shanna Daugherty in the 10th individual spot. It was a third place finish in the sheep judging portion, with Adam Sellers the 7th high individual and Matt Trostle 15th. Sellers took the first place individually in hog judging, with the team finishing eighth.

To help fund the team's travel to participate at the national contest, Hoss's Steak and Sea House restaurant chain purchased the champion steer at the York junior livestock sale and donated it back for resale. Those proceeds to attend the national runoffs were shared equally by York County's state-winning livestock judging and meats judging teams.

Cambria County Selects Prize-Winning Capons

SOUTH FORK (Cambria Co.) — The prize-winning capon at the annual Cambria County 4-H Capon Roundup weighed in at 10½ pounds and brought owner Justin Mullen $36 per pound. Frank Castelli of Central Transportation Inc., purchased the prize winning bird.

Mullen's two blue ribbon capons sold for a total $460. The second bird was purchased by KFC for $8 per pound.

Justin, 13, is the son of Francis and Tresa Mullen of Ebensburg.

The reserve champion capons were shown by Reed Myers, 9, son of Mark and Diane Myers of South Fork. His two birds weighed in at 23 pounds and brought $362. Ed Long of Long's Hardwood Inc. of Ebensburg purchased one of Reed's birds for $25 per pound. Ebensburg Rotary Club brought the second bird for $7 per pound. Sixteen birds were auctioned off by Wayne Templeton.

Overall average price of the sale without including champion prices was $7.50 per pound. Each 4-H member who participates in Round-Up must begin the project with the same age and breed of capon. Records are maintained on feeding management and total cost of bringing the entry to maturity. Entries are judged on appearance, chilling, softness of flesh, weight, proper packaging, and have two birds that give the same appearance in looks, weight, and shape.

Other participants and the price received per pound for both birds included Carrie Durica, $10 and $6.50; Robert Hegeman, $9; andy Myers, $9 and $6.75; Megan Skebeck, $8 and $6.75; Rosemary Hegemann, $7.50 and $6.25; Matthew Skebeck, $7 and $8.

Three capons were donated to the St. Vincent DePaul Society food bank by the Rotary Club and Agway Inc.

Warren County 4-H Holds Achievement Night

YOUNGSVILLE (Warren Co.) — "4-H . . . More Than You Ever Imagined" was the theme of the Achievement Night recently sponsored by Warren Rotary Club and Warren County 4-H Development Council. The evening began with Maris Ojamuru, a 4-H Program leader from Estonia who has been visiting Warren County 4-H family, Craig Wilcox of Russell. She spoke on what freedom means in her country, the 4-H program, and her beautiful country.

The evening continued with presenting two traveling Rotary trophies which are awarded annually. The 1996 Family Living trophy was presented to Kyle Young of Pittsfield for his work in bettering people's lives and community service. Kelsi Wilcox of Russell received the 1996 Agriculture Award for her accomplishments in dairy work and community service. Companion trophies were given to last year winners Bailey Klinestiver of Tidioute and Melissa Landers of Russell.

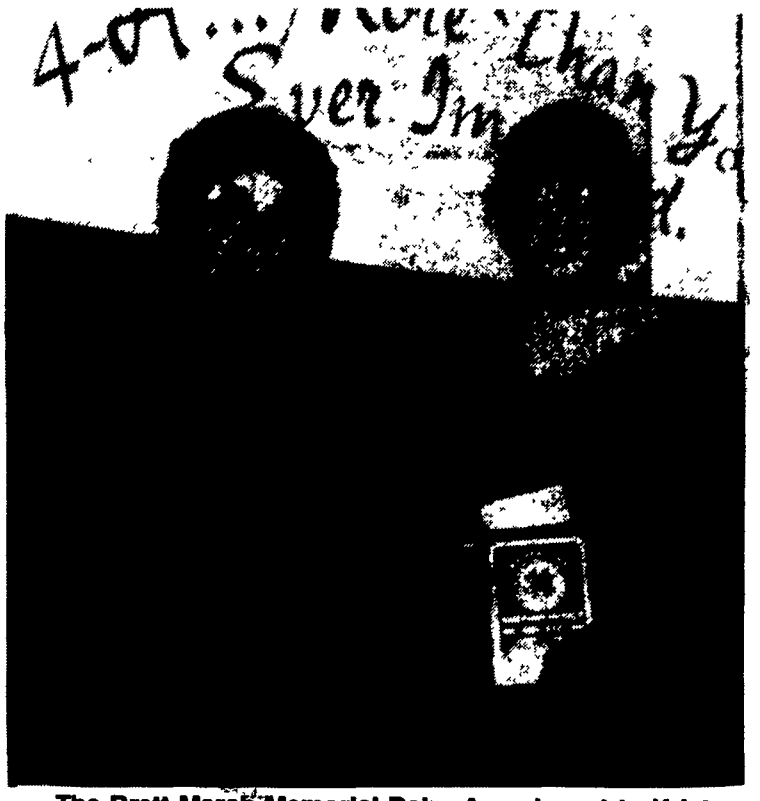
Watts Memorial award recipients were nominated by 4-H leaders to honor 4-H members for their cooperation, attitude, good spirit and character. Paul Ekey of Shamrock Sheep Club and Lauren Timco of Nature Watchers were recognized for their overall 4-H career.

The Warren County Commissioners sponsored the 1996 Achievement Awards with $50 savings bonds. Commissioner Howard Brush presented the Citizenship Achievement award to Melissa Landers for her Keystone 4-H Club hosting, Leadership, and Child Care project work. Carrie Swanson of Russell received the Community Service award for leadership in club community projects and her individual 4-H member work. Kelsi Wilcox of Russell received the Communications Achievement Award for her demonstration and presentation skills at civic club and school programs, and radio presentations.

PennWest honors 4-H members who have good production records books. The following received $25 awards — Kyle Anderson of Russell for sheep production and Dustin Wilcox of Russell for dairy production. Carrie Lindell was presented with the overall Warren County animal production record for her horse production records. She received a $200 savings bond.

The 4-H Development Council presented three $200 scholarships. Connie Swanson of Russell attends Jamestown Community College, Mandy Schuyler of Warren attends Pittsburgh Culinary Arts School, and Carrie Swanson of Russell attends Jamestown Business College.

The Debbie Knowlton Award for outstanding livestock 4-H member went to Rachael Swanson of Russell. The Brett Marsh Memorial Dairy Award recipient was earned by Kristen Hitchcock of Russell.



The Brett Marsh Memorial Dairy Award went to Kristen Hitchcock (right) of Russell. June Jones, Brett's mother, (left) made the presentation.

....LOADED WITH OPPORTUNITY

CHURCHVILLE (Maryland) — "The best auction we've had in history," is how Roy Hutchins describes the 4-H livestock sale at the 1996 Harford County Fair, which benefited cancer leg amputee Ben Keyes. Hutchins' business, J&R Sheds, is administering the Ben Keyes Fund, which was established to help with fundraising for the Keyes family's extensive medical bills.

Some $35,000 was raised through the sale and an ensuing pig roast from additional animals purchased there and donated back. Fund-raising efforts continue. Contributions may be sent to The Ben Keyes Fund, c/o J&R Sheds, 3025 Churchville Road, Churchville, MD 21028.

Delaware County Recognizes Outstanding 4-H'ers

SPRINGFIELD (Delaware Co.) — Members, volunteer leaders, and supporters of the Delaware County 4-H program were recently honored at a recognition dinner at the Garrett Williamson Lodge in Newtown Square.

The evening of fellowship and awards was planned by the 4-H Teen Council under the direction of adult advisers Jim Short and Judy MacRone. The officers of the teen council are Sarah MacPhail of Newtown Square, president; Brenda MacPhail of Newtown Square, vice president; and Alexis Tretiak of Media, secretary-treasurer.

County Councilman Tom Killion presented a plaque to outgoing board member Judy Boody of Newtown Square in appreciation for her service to the organization as a club leader, 4-H board member, and secretary, and as an extension board member and secretary. Killion also recognized the adult volunteers in attendance for their contributions to youth development in Delaware County. Bud Bryan, 4-H coordinator, presented a set of 4-H flags and banners to Mitzi Ramsey, leader of the 4-H Seeing Eye Puppy Club, for their continued community service. The members of this club raise puppies in their home for approximately one year to socialize the pups and prepare them for training at the Seeing Eye, Inc. in New Jersey. Chuck Friel of Drexel Hill was presented with the 1996 Seeing Eye Best Friend Award.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Videon were recognized for their continued support of the 4-H program. Videon, as chairman of the Garrett Williamson Foundation, has been instrumental in maintaining the partnership between Garrett Williamson and 4-H by making the barn and pasture of the 240-acre farm in Newtown Square available to 4-H for educational programs. Brian Collins, executive director of the Garrett Williamson Foundation, was also recognized for his support and cooperation.

Videon recognized Bryan for his 40 years as an extension agent in Delaware County. The entire audience was entertained by a humorous skit and lively dance performed by the Teen Council in honor of Bryan.

Farm Signs Reflect Culture

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

TALMAGE (Lancaster Co.) — The homemade signs that advertise farm produce and products have always fascinated Jim Drescher.

A former English teacher, Drescher was intrigued by signs advertising "culiflower" and those spelled uniquely such as a backward-formed "n" in corn.

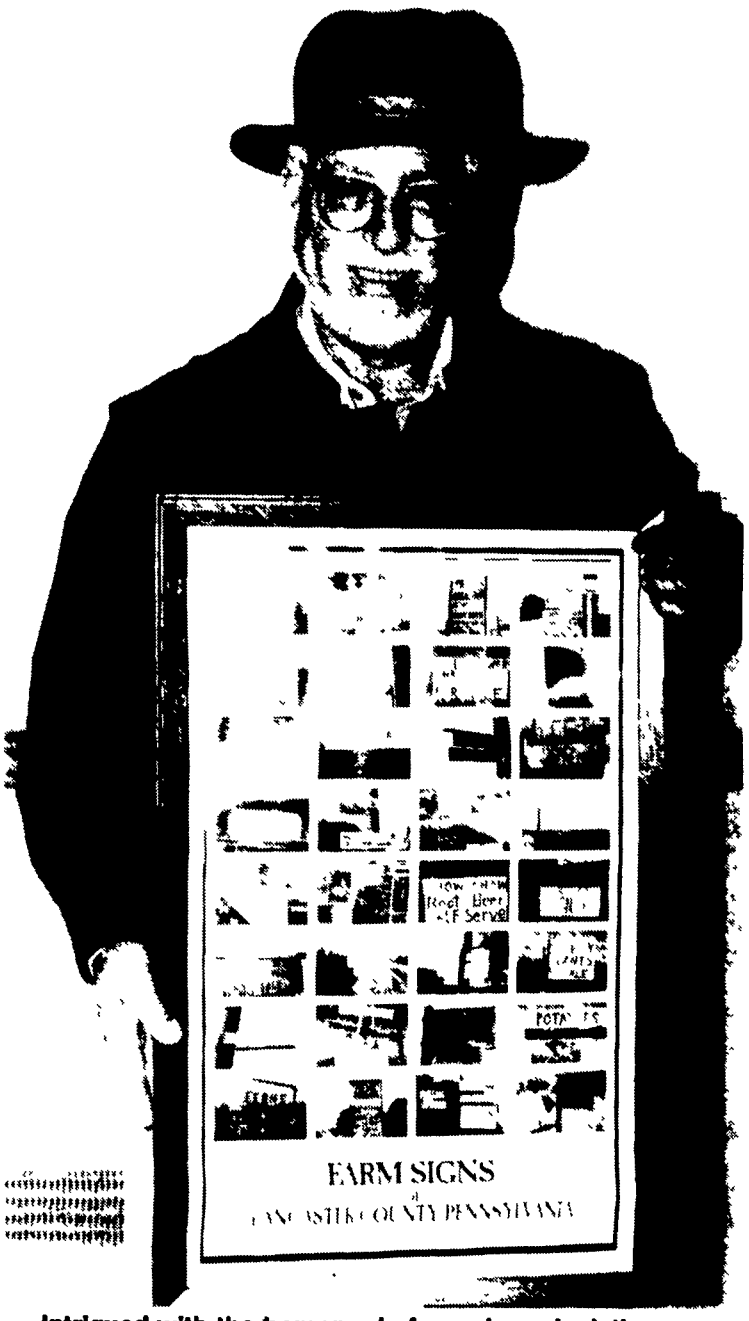
In his job as a tour guide for the county, Drescher found tourists were curious about signs advertising "Dressed Chicken," "Thrashed Straw and Corn Fodder," "Chow Chow," or as in one sign "Cow Chow."

A self-taught photographer, Drescher started shooting slides of the road signs for his own collection. After he had a few hundred slides, Drescher noticed posters depicting covered bridges and another of the church steeples in county.

"Why not a poster displaying farm signs of Lancaster County?" Drescher wondered. He selected 32 color photographs showing a variety of sign shapes and spellings for the project.

Drescher worked with graphic artist Linda Fisher to design a 16½ x26¾ -inch color poster that is available in local stores and gift shops.

Unframed posters can also be ordered by mail for $10, which includes tax, shipping and handling. Mail to Jim Drescher, P.O. Box 385, Talmage, PA 17580.



Intrigued with the homemade farm signs depicting produce for sale in Lancaster County, Jim Drescher sorted through his photographs to design this poster.

Make It Happen! FFA

Students Become Leaders, Develop Vision Through FFA

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — FFA empowers students to develop and fulfill a vision for themselves, their communities and their nation.

FFA works hand in hand with agricultural education, but its impact reaches far beyond preparing employees for the food, fiber and natural resource systems. Students develop the premier leadership, personal growth and career success skills they need to win in agriculture or any other industry, and in life.

"Agriculture offers tremendous opportunities for young people," said National FFA Adviser Larry D. Case, "and FFA is helping them explore and take advantage of those opportunities. Even if they decide not to pursue one of the 200 careers in the business, science and technology of agriculture, they will benefit from the public speaking skills, self-confidence and leadership talents they develop in FFA."

FFA members across the United States, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands will organize events and activities to foster awareness of agricultural education and support for FFA during National FFA Week, Feb. 15-22. National FFA Week is held each year during the week of George Washington's birthday to recognize his leadership and commitment to American agriculture.

This year's theme, "FFA - Leaders with a Vision," promoted through communities nationwide, emphasizes how FFA enables students to develop leadership skills, prepares them to set goals and visions, and empowers them to achieve success. They are the leaders who will carry the agricultural industry and the nation into the next millennium.

Regional Contests

On Thursday, Oct. 24, the Twin Valley FFA took part in regional FFA fall contests. The chapter had approximately 60 students participate.

In the ag mechanics contest, students had to take a written test, soldier copper pipe, read motor manuals, and identify tools. Todd Terry placed 13th, and Andy Elston placed 14th. Tom Curtis, Jeff Cook, and Brian Riffey all participated.

In agricultural salesmanship, each student had to prepare products to sell, take a written test, prepare a sales pitch, and complete a practicum (design a poster to help sell citrus fruit). Louis Jones placed 4th, Cheri Chalfant place 9th, and Nicole Moyer and Joel Graydus were also team members.

In the dairy foods contest, students took a written test, sampled milk to identify defects, tasted cheeses, tested defective milk for mastitis (a disease of the udder), and identified real and artificial dairy products. Students that participated were Jamie Powell, placing 5th; Julie Peterson, placing 11th; and Mike Christi, Adam Miller, Crystal Care, Chris Keith, Valerie Lanser, Brie Robbins, Andy Teter, Whitney Jackson, Erica Ulman, Lee Millisock, April Sayson, and Katie Coffey.

In the dairy judging contest, students judged six sets of cows and took a written test. The students who participated are Brooke Zook, placing 29th; Todd Mast, placing 74th; and Tamara King, Rebecca Mast, Kristin Leisey, and Meg Mitchell.

Many students participated in the horse judging contest. In this contest students had to identify tack, judge horses, and take a written test. Students who participated were Amy Barnett, Beth Zerr, Melissa Miller, James Ford, Nikki Smith, Joe Harvey, Melissa McCue, and Jacqi Hartung.

In the wildlife contest, students had to identify birds, mammals, wildlife foods and signs, bird calls, and take a written test.

Box 7003, villa Park, IL 60181. If anyone knows of local sources, please send the information.

ANSWER — Rosa Sensenig of Quarryville requested directions to make a wreath using wrapped hard candy. Thanks to Ann Martin, New Holland; B. Light, Lebanon, and others for sending instructions.

Wrapped Candy Wreath

1 wire clothes hanger or wire frame of comparable width (circumference of wreath can vary from 3 to 16 inches, depending on use)
Wire (.025-inch gauge)
Wrapped candy in bulk (an 8-inch wreath require about 1½ pounds)
Box
Blunt scissors
If using hanger, form into wreath shape

Apply two pieces of candy at a time to frame by wrapping wire around the twisted ends of the candy wrappers and then twisting the wire around the frame. Be sure wire is pulled snugly on frame.

Repeat process until wreath is filled.

If using a clothes hanger, your wreath has a built-in hook for hanging. If using a wire circle, fashion a hanger from ribbon or wire.

Affix a bow to the top of the wreath and attach a blunt pair of scissors to one of the bow's streamers, so the recipients can cut the candy off the wreath.

Include a tag that says, "Help yourself."

Thanks to Martha Weaver who suggests using a dollop of peanut butter on a trap.

Another reader wrote that the following method really works for mice. Set a bucket upside down and stack books or blocks beside it so mice can get to the top. Place cheese, cake or other tempting food in the bucket. When mice begin to feed, take away one book to make them leap to the top of the upside down bucket. Phase 2: Turn bucket right side up and fill it half full of water. Hang bait above it with a string. The mice will leap into the water.

BUSINESS ◆ NEWS

Hill Named Communications Specialist

Heather Hill

ITHACA, N.Y. — Heather Hill, Sister Bay, Wis., has been named communications specialist for Genex Cooperative, a subsidiary of Cooperative Resources International (CRI).

Hill's responsibilities include writing feature stories and news updates for the CRI member magazine Horizons, assisting in the production of the Genex employee publication Genex Press, and writing articles for the CRI employee publication, On Target.

Her other duties will include supporting the public relations staff in coordinating member meetings, assisting in dairy cattle photography, providing input for national and regional advertising, and assisting with member service activities.

Originally from Grantsburg, Wis., Hill was raised on a Red and White Holstein dairy farm. She was an active 4-H member, showing cattle for 10 years. She also assisted the Polk-Burnett Dairy Council, doing in-store and school dairy promotions.

Hill was graduated with degrees in agriculture and journalism from the University of Wisconsin-River Falls in December 1995. She actively participated in the UW-RF Dairy Club, the Agricultural Education Society, and the Agricultural Communicators of Tomorrow. She also represented the University on the UW-RF dairy cattle judging team. And she served as the science and environment editor of the college newspaper, The Student Voice and the College of Agriculture alumni publication, The Fence Post.

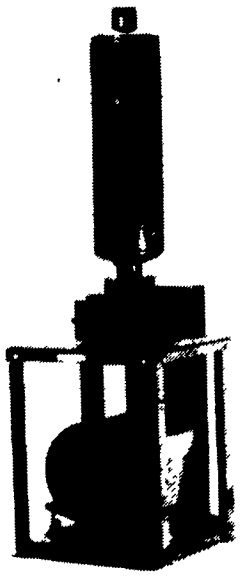
Vacuum System Ecologically Safe, Economically Sound



The ECOpump™ vacuum system was designed and created by Alfa Laval Agri™ to offer dairy producers a technically superior vacuum pump that is constructed with precision engineering to provide the best CFM performance per horsepower in its class.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The ECOpump ™ vacuum system was designed and created by Alfa Laval Agri™ to offer dairy producers a technically superior vacuum pump that is constructed with precision engineering to provide the best CFM performance per horsepower in its class.

The ECOpump Vacuum System is based on lobe pump technology. Two figure-eight impellers rotate in opposite directions, trapping air against the housing as they pass the inlet. As air is expelled, a vacuum is created. Timing gears position the impellers maintaining exacting clearances necessary to deliver a full 15 inches of vacuum at efficiencies similar to rotary vane suppliers.

Exclusive features of the ECOpump that make it technically superior are reliable splash oil lubrication, heavy duty bearings and shafts, precision cut timing gears, piston ring type air and oil seals, cast iron housing and end plates, and a unique vertical port arrangement.

The ECOpump from Alfa Laval Agri was engineered to provide superior performance and efficiency in the 5, 7.5 and 10 horsepower ranges. This pump is a perfect choice for stanchion barns and small parlor operators who want a technically superior, oil-free vacuum supplier that is ecologically safe and economically affordable.

Field Demo Features Ride And Drive

OXFORD (Chester Co.) — Enfield Equipment, headquartered here, recently featured a farmer field demonstration and ride and drive at Glenville Farms south of Cochranville.

At the field demonstration back in November, 60 farmers attended. Speakers included Jim Carroll, aftermarket manager with John Deere and Company; Gary Kohman, territory 35 manager, John Deere and Company; Richard Noff, territory sales representative from Bush Hog; Carol Neel, Deere Credit; and Bill Knight, manager of Enfield Equipment in Oxford.

The featured unit was the John Deere Model 9400 Articulate tractor with 425 HP, a high performance, 12.5-liter engine (which can get up to 135 percent of rated speed torque to as low as 900 RPM). The tractor produces a 7 percent power bulge and has 8 percent more fuel efficiency, according to Enfield.

Also featured was the John Deere 7810 rated at 150 HP, with an all new 8.1-liter engine, upgraded 19-speed powershift, and new left hand reverser. Also available for hands-on ride and drive was the Deere 8875 Skid Steer, the Deere 5500 cab tractor, the Deere 6400 cab tractor, and the Deere 8400 cab tractor. Bush Hog was also represented during the 10-hour demonstration.

The Deere 7810 was pulling the new CR15 Bush Hog mower with counter-rotating blades.

Gary Kohman, territory 35 manager, John Deere and Company points out the features of the John Deere Model 9400 Articulate tractor with 425 HP and a high performance, 12.5-liter engine at a field demonstration.

Disk Cart Expands Versatility

Ready to be teamed with a ripper, chisel, seed drill or planter, the Case IH 6800 disk cart (shown here with the Case IH Combo-mulch Ripper) can be used throughout the year in a variety of applications, helping farmers maximize their time, money and yields, said Dave Duff, Case Corporation product manager.

RACINE, Wis. — Ready to be teamed with a ripper, chisel, seed drill or planter, the new Case IH 6800 disk cart helps farmers get more from their investment because it can be used throughout the year in a variety of applications.

"The 6800 cart can help farmers maximize their time, money and yields," said Dave Duff, Case Corporation product manager. "It will become an integral part of many agricultural operations because of its versatility, both to meet varied applications and to adjust to farming practices as future compliance regulations and requirements change."

The 6800 disk cart can be equipped with a planter, drill, chisel plow or ripper. Additionally, due to its rugged design and solid frame, spray tanks can be mounted to eliminate passes through the fields.

Changing equipment, Duff said, is easy with the cart's dual three-point hitches. "Farmers can adjust disk depth on the go to adapt to changing field conditions with the independently controlled front three-point hitch," he said. "And raising and lowering the front hitch won't affect rear three-point hitch operation."

He said there is an easy-to-read front hitch depth indicator to aid in setting accurate working depths, and to make it easy to return to present depths after in-field adjustments.

A unique ground-tracking feature keeps consistent working depths during both tillage or planting. This ground tracking feature, Duff said, allows the hitch to float approximately 10 inches up and down, to accommodate the contour of the fields.

"The 6800 cart will likely spend more time in the field than any other implement in a farmer's operation," Duff said. "And it's built to handle the wear and tear. Its rugged design means long machine life, high reliability and minimal downtime."

DowElanco, Gowan Form Product Partnership

LYUMA, Ariz.— Indianapolis-DowElanco and Gowan Company have announced a strategic product partnership focused on the U.S. horticultural markets for Lorsban 50W insecticide.

The partnership grants subregistration and trademark rights to Gowan who will, in turn, register, formulate, and distribute Lorsban 50W Insecticide.

"Horticultural crops represent the primary use for Lorsban 50W and the partnership recognizes Gowan's expertise and strategic focus on horticultural markets," commented Bruce Miehle, business director for DowElanco. He said that DowElanco management views the partnership as a win-win for both DowElanco and Gowan.

Gowan Company has emerged as a leading formulator and marketer of products for specialty crop agriculture. Over the past few years, they have refined their focus on the North American tree fruit, vine, and vegetable markets. They have developed a proprietary product line based on partnerships with basic chemical companies.

John Kasper, product manager for Gowan Company said, "Lorsban 50W will complement our current product line in the horticultural markets."

Gehl To Expand South Dakota Facilities

WEST BEND, Wis. — The Gehl Company (NASDAQ: GEHL) board of directors has approved a 22,400 square foot expansion project at the Company's Madison, S.D. skid steer loader manufacturing facility and a 30,400 square foot expansion project at the Company's Yankton, S.D. facility that produces Dynalift® telescopic rough terrain forklifts and Power Box® asphalt pavers.

The Madison expansion, coupled with a 4,530 square foot expansion completed earlier this year, will give Gehl a total of nearly 124,000 square feet under cover on the 27-acre Madison site. Ground breaking is scheduled for late September with completion in July 1997.

The Yankton project, which is expected to being in October 1996, will double the current plant capacity when completed in January 1998.

Total investment for both projects including buildings and related production equipment will be $5.2 million.

"These expansion projects will give us a much needed increase in plant capacity," said Victor A. Mancinelli, Gehl executive vice president and chief operating officer. "We expect to augment our work force by approximately 50 employees in Madison and 60 employees in Yankton when we start running at full capacity."

Pa. Farmers Union President Discusses Milk Prices

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Pennsylvania Farmers Union President Robert C. Junk Jr. recently joined National Farmers Union President Lee Swenson, three state Farmers Union president, and other agricultural leaders to meet with Agricultural Secretary Dan Glickman.

In the 1½ hour meeting, representatives discussed the $3 to $4 decline to farmers in milk prices over the last two months and how the National Cheese Exchange may have been involved in this price decline.

Farmers Union is asking President Clinton to issue an executive order on the National Cheese Exchange (NCE).

The proposed executive order calls for 2 actions:

- To direct the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) or the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to provide oversight of the NCE activities. Currently the only oversight is by the NCE board of directors. Federal oversight is necessary because although the market trades less than one percent of all cheese, it acts as the price setter for 90-95 percent of the nation's milk.
- To implement a federal regulation prohibiting trading against interest, a form of market manipulation. Trading against interest occurs when a company that is a buyer off the exchange sells at lower sale prices on the exchange for the purpose of lowering the wholesale price. Studies have shown that the low wholesale price created by trading against interest harms dairy farmers and that the savings have not been passed on to consumers.

In addition, Farmers Union is urging Secretary Glickman for immediate implementation of the following:

- USDA should take emergency action to stop the free fall of dairy prices by setting a floor of no less than $14.00 under the Basic Formula Price.
- Increase dairy exports through aggressive use of the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP).
- Activate the DEIP coalition.
- Increase sales of dairy products to school lunch and other government nutrition programs.
- Increase the dairy purchases under Public Law 480, the Food for Progress program.
- Increase cheese advertising to promote stronger sales.
- Assist in establishing a common marketing agency among the cooperatives to more orderly market cheese.

President Junk stated to the secretary, "We as dairy farmers cannot afford this type of drop on the farm. We need immediate action. We need the president to act on an executive order to provide federal oversight of the National Cheese Exchange."

A study by the University of Wisconsin released earlier this year showed a pattern of market manipulation that cost farmers over $1 billion in lost income over the period studied. Federal oversight, as well as a rule prohibiting such manipulation, is desperately needed to ensure farmers receive the full value for their milk.

While in Washington, D.C., President Junk also met with several other key USDA officials including Assistant Secretary for Marketing and Regulatory Programs Mike Dunn, Deputy Adminstrator of Marketing Programs Ken Clayton, Director of the Dairy Division Rich McKee, and Chief Economist Keith Collins.

Junk emphasized that the new milk market order program must be made farmer-friendly so that producers can easily determine the pay price for milk.

Sodium Hydroxide Treated Whole Grains For Dairy Cattle

Jud Heinrichs
and
Virginia Ishler
Department of Dairy
and Animal Science
Penn State

The concept of treating whole grains with sodium hydroxide has gained interest on the part of Pennsylvania producers in the past several months. Alkali treatment of whole grains (other than corn) is not a new concept. Limited research on sodium hydroxide, or caustic soda, treatment as an alternative to other physical forms of grain processing has been chiefly conducted by the Europeans and Australians. This article presents general findings from available research studies regarding the benefits, some of the problems and areas of concern associated with sodium hydroxide treatment of grains. These points should be seriously considered by anyone who is considering adopting this method of grain processing.

Sodium hydroxide (NaOH), sometimes referred to as caustic soda, soda lye, or sodium hydrate, is a chemical compound that is very corrosive to animal and vegetable tissue. It is hazardous to both humans and animals and precautions must be taken very seriously as pointed out in promotional literature for the products. Both the compound alone and a solution of NaOH and water are very basic and have the potential to cause severe skin burns upon contact. Inhalation of the dust or concentrated mist may cause damage to the respiratory tract. If the mixture comes into contact with the eye, it can cause permanent eye damage. The compound generates considerable heat while dissolving in water. When the mixture is applied to grains, it must be allowed to soak into the grain before feeding as it can cause burns to the mouth and gastro-intestinal tract of the cow. Considering the hazardous nature of this materials, do the benefits of sodium hydroxide treatment of grain outweigh the potential hazards?"

A review of available research data and scientific journals indicate that treatment of whole grains with NaOH does not appear to be justified, since most research indicates no improvement in milk production or milk composition over physical processing of grain. Further, the effects on starch digestibility in the rumen and lower digestive tract have not been adequately determined. In addition, long term health effects on high-producing cows have not been studied. Research to date has addressed some of these factors. However, most of the work is quite old and many of the nutritional parameters that we look for today were not evaluated in those studies.

Research evaluating NaOH has focused primarily on its use as a chemical treatment for poor quality forages and straw to improve digestibility by ruminants. This type of treatment on forage has also been done with other strong basic compounds such as ammonia. When NaOH comes into contact with the plant's cell walls, it begins a chemical breakdown. This provides access by rumen microbes to less digestible portions of the plant and increases the digestibility. This increases the animal's intake of these poorer quality forages. Similarly, NaOH treatment of whole grains such as barley will improve the digestibility of the whole grain by the rumen microbes.

The majority of research dealing with NaOH treatment has been on small grains: barley, oats, and wheat. An extensive literature search revealed only one paper dealing with treatment of corn and it involved feeding sheep. It was a small scale study to look at rumen digestibility only. Many of the trials have been done with either sheep or steers, with very limited work dealing with the lactating dairy cow. Small grains, especially barley, have been emphasized in most of the dairy cattle studies.

The purpose of treating whole cereal grains with caustic soda is to disrupt the seed coat by partial hydrolysis of the hemicellulose and lignin. This causes a swelling of the outer starch granules so that upon consumption, the rumen bacteria and enzymes can gradually gain access to the starchy endosperm. This results in a digestibility similar to that of physically processed grains and significantly greater than that of whole grains. One suggested advantage of feeding NaOH treated grain is an increase in rumen pH. This equates to a possible decreased incidence in rumen acidosis and laminitis, especially in fattening cattle which often are fed rations containing relatively little or no forage. At first glance, this may appear as an advantage, but following sound nutrition, feeding management practices, and incorporating proper grain processing and grinding, the same results are easily achievable without the potential risks associated with NaOH treatment.

Seven published research papers were found dealing with NaOH treated grain fed to lactating dairy cattle. These papers compared the response to NaOH treated grain and physically processed grain. Barley was the grain fed in most of the diets. In six of the seven papers, there was no significant difference in milk production. There was a trend for higher production in one Australian study and a trend for lower production in five out of the other six studies. One trial from Michigan saw a tendency for reduce milk persistency on the NaOH treated grain compared to the physically processed grain.

Milk composition results were more variable. Sometimes an improvement in fat content was observed with no difference in milk protein. Studies from Denmark and Scotland showed a significant improvement in milk fat but no significant difference in fat corrected milk. However, the study from Scotland was using 70 to 80 percent concentrate in the diet. All others saw no differences in milk composition between treatment groups. One research report comparing whole, rolled, and NaOH treated oats, saw significantly higher milk protein with NaOH treated oats compared to whole oats, but no difference compared to the rolled oats.

Cows used in these trials had a strikingly low average milk production. In the six papers that showed no significant difference in milk production, the level of production ranged from 30 to 58 pounds of milk per cow per day. The one paper from Australia that showed a positive result had cows averaging 17 to 23 pounds of milk. There is no published data that reflects the effects of NaOH treated grain on what we currently consider to be high producing dairy cattle.

In the concluding statments in many of the papers reviewed, the authors mentioned the need to determine the long-term feeding effects of NaOH treated grain on high producing dairy cattle. One group of Irish researchers did address this concern and found that feeding alkali treated grain predisposed cattle to renal (kidney) lesions. It is possible that feeding a ration with a high pH can lead to high urinary pH between 9 and 9.5 (normal is usually considered between 7 and 8). This can have an adverse affect not only on the kidneys, but can lead to urinary calculi. Further investigations are needed to address a higher sodium intake and any possible effect on acid-based balance and renal function before recommendations for feeding this processed grain occur. Another factor to consider is that animals fed NaOH treated grain need additional water. This may be an important consideration during the summer months especially if there are any limitations on water consumption. Data are not available on how much water consumption increases.

Treatment of barley with NaOH can also reduce the nutritional value of the grain to the animal. In studies from Ireland, vitamin E was not detected in treated barley. Another study has shown that the amount of lysine, an essential and sometimes limiting amino acid for dairy cows, was reduced in treated barley. Again, more research is needed to determine what other nutrients may be affected and to what degree they are affected.

Some practical problems involved with NaOH treated grain include effects on handling the grain after treatment. The mass of grain tends to solidify and consequently cannot be transferred directly into any storage bin after treatment. It needs to agitated during cooling to prevent solidification. It is recommended that the treated grain be allowed to air for four days before feeding to achieve the benefits of the buffering effect, avoid potential palatability problems, and prevent burns to the animal's mouth and digestive system.

Based on the review of research data and the hazards associated with the use of NaOH, this practice is not recommended for Pennsylvania dairy producers at this time.

MMI Urges USDA Officials To Take Action

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Don Schriver, chief executive officer of Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI), met with the nation's top dairy cooperative leaders and key officials from the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) to urge action to relieve the current drop in the price of milk at the farm level.

At a recently held meeting, Schriver and the National Milk Producers Federation urged USDA's Michael Dunn, assistant secretary for marketing and regulatory programs, and Richard McKee, director of the dairy division, to use available resources to alleviate the recent severe decline in farm milk prices.

Schriver pointed out that the price swings are dramtically impacting dairy farmer operations.

"Dairy farmers have gone from the highest farm price in recent history in September to a potential drop of $4 by January," said Schriver. "The drastic price swings, coupled with increased feed costs and other input factors, spell disasteer to many of our producers."

Dairy leaders urged the USDA to take action in four areas:

- The department should move immediately to adopt a $13 per hundredweight minimum Basic Formula Price for Class I and II milk for January throuugh July of 1997.
- Dairy product sales should expand under the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP).
- The Food for Progress Program should be given authority to purchase dairy products for overseas humanitarian aid.
- The advance purchases of dairy products should be authorized to meet 1997 needs for the school lunch program and other food assistance programs.

Although these steps won't entirely modify the situation, they would definitely impact the severity and duration of the price declines, state Schriver.

Dairy leaders expressed concern over the impact of the elimination of the government purchase program and the phasing out of the dairy support price on the market.

"Frankly, we're in new territory here," said Schriver. "We have no history for gauging the swings in the market in this new environment. The phasing out of the market stabilizing programs that the industry had come to accept are gone. We're now beginning to feel the impact."

The cooperative leaders also announced that dairy producers, through their national advertising and promotion organizations, are taking some "first step" measures to increase consumer purchases of cheese.

The "Cheese to the Rescue" campaign targets 22 million U.S. consumers, and includes $8.3 million in television and $500,000 in magazine advertisements; $4.9 million in retail media and special promotions; and $1.4 million in coupons.

"The industry is using every available promotion resource to generate sales of dairy products during this holiday season," said Schriver. "Dairy producers are putting their shoulders to the wheel. We hope the USDA will, too."

USDA officials agreed to respond to the crisis indicating immediate expansion of the Food for Peace purchases aimed at the crisis in Central Africa. According to USDA's Dunn, the Foreign Agriculture Service will increase DEIP acceptances to the maximum allowable under the General Agreement on Tariff and Trade (GATT).

The USDA agreed to immediately increase advance purchases of dairy products for 1997 program use. The $13 floor on Class I and II is more controversial, said department officials. Concern over this action will make it difficult to enact.

Schriver expressed appreciation for the USDA's concern and response to the situation, and urged continued discussions on strategies for bringing stability into future dairy farm prices.

Headquartered in Strongsville, Ohio, MMI is the third largest dairy cooperative and the 11th largest dairy food company in the U.S. MMI represents 9,000 dairy farm families in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Vermont, West Virginia and Delaware. The co-op has manufacturing facilities in Indiana, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency; this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Protect your valuable feeds from the elements... increase the efficiency of your feeds, your animals, and your labor.

"IF YOU NEED A SILO...
YOU NEED TO CALL BOB FRANCIS...
There will be a modest price increase effective January 1, And besides our schedule is already filling in. Don't wait too late and be disappointed.

2oz. Seal of Quality Wheeling

Genuine Old-Time Quality

Every Wheeling 2 oz sheet is manufactured from heavy gauge steel topped with an extra thick zinc coating and formed into profiles that contribute strength and good looks Build with a Wheeling 2 oz sheet and you ll be working with the kind of durability and dependability that's been a standard in the industry for almost 100 years

The Proof is in the Process

The performance behind the Wheeling 2 oz Seal of Quality is possible because of Wheeling's patented Cook Norteman manufacturing process This technology allows a more consistent quality product and a more uniform coating with unsurpassed zinc adhesion The process takes more handling and more time, but the end result is a super premium panel that has its own limited 20 year performance warranty

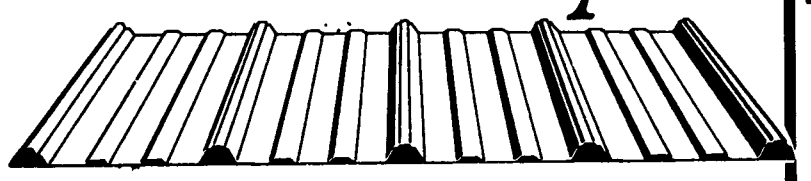
Rural Economy



Cost-efficient Centurydrain™ roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

Can Phosphorus Improve Disease Resistance In Cereals?

NORCROSS, Ga. — Potassium has been directly linked to plant disease resistance by numerous researchers on a wide variety of crops and diseases. But what about phosphorus? Does phosphorus have a part to play in disease suppression?

Phosphorus is present in every living plant cell and has a direct role in plant growth. Plants need it for photosynthesis, respiration, energy storage and transfer, cell division and enlargement, and several other processes. Phosphorus promotes early root growth and development, hastens crop maturity, increases winter hardiness and improves crop quality. And yes, it helps suppress plant disease, especially root diseases in wheat and barley.

Common root rot, take-all and other root diseases are an unseen problem - but they cost cereal crop growers million of dollars every year in lost yield. These diseases are difficult to control. Cultivars vary in their tolerance to these diseases. Seed treatment and shallow seeding reduce the risk of infection and crop rotation can limit the pathogen populations. Maintenance of good soil fertility is also helpful.

Research has shown phosphorus fertilization to be effective in reducing losses from take-all in wheat and common root rot in barley. One recent Saskatchewan study found seed-placed phosphate reduced the frequency of the take-all pathogen in wheat roots by about 50 percent and root rot severity in barley by 10 percent. Another Alberta study showed seed-placed phosphorus reduced the average yield loss of nine cultivars of barley infected with root rot from 40 to 30 percent.

Phosphate fertilizers are most effective in reducing root rot problems when nitrogen is not limiting crop growth. The best disease control is obtained with the application of both nitrogen and phosphorus. Balanced and adequate soil fertility supports healthy plant growth.

How phosphorus reduces disease severity is not known ... but it does stimulate root development. And, a healthy, vigorous root system will better compensate for infections by root pathogens.

Phosphorus deficiency is common in the cereal growing areas of the Northern Great Plains. About 60 to 90 percent of soils from the Canadian prairies and the bordering states test medium or less in plant available phosphorus, and require fertilization. Suppression of root disease is one more reason for a good phosphorus fertility program.

Root diseases ... out of sight but not out of mind. Pay careful attention to phosphorus fertilization and your crop will have a competitive edge, both above and below ground.

Pick A Peck Of Unpocked Peppers

WOOSTER, Ohio — The life of a pepper plant isn't easy. Just when things begin to look positive, something like bacterial spot, Phytophthora blight, white mold, or bacterial soft rot can attack.

Fortunately, researchers at Ohio State University are working to prevent those assaults. Sally Miller, a researcher in the Department of Plant Pathology, is looking for ways to keep seedlings free of bacterial spot while in the greenhouse. This will give the plants a head start on a healthy crop production cycle. She's also testing new compounds for disease control and evaluating crop resistant varieties. Miller said researchers are looking at chemical and cultural control measures for Phytophthora blight, including the incorporation of compost in the field. Fungicides are being checked for the prevention and control of white mold.

Bacterial spot and Phytophthora blight can cause severe losses because there are no really effective control chemicals after the disease has begun. Bacterial spot is most severe when it comes in on diseased or contaminated plants. Phytophthora is soil borne and becomes a problem after heavy rains. Though disease can be detrimental to pepper crops, farmers can take preventive measures to control the spread of disease.

"For bacterial spot, producers must start with clean seed," Miller said. "If the seed has not been tested and/or treated by the supplier, or if they are saving their own seed, treatment to remove bacteria from the seed surface is necessary. Growers must then see that they produce pepper transplants in the greenhouse in a way to reduce the spread of bacteria."

To do this, Miller suggests that growers allow foliage to dry out completely before nightfall, provide good ventilation, never handle the plants when wet, and avoid growing pepper and tomato transplants in the same greenhouse. Miller also warns against growing pepper plants in the same greenhouse with ornamentals. "Thrips can spread tomato spotted wilt virus, which could cause devastation in the field," she said.

If a grower has had a problem with bacterial spot, Miller recommends raising resistant varieties. "They should have resistance to races one, two and three," Miller said. "Unfortunately, other races have now been found in Ohio, although as of 1996 race three predominated."

Phythophthora blight warrants a number of recommendations for disease management, although they usually must be combined." And they still may not give complete control when the disease pressure is high," Miller said.

Miller recommends growing plants on domed, raised beds, applying the fungicide Ridomil at planting and again twice during the season, selecting well-drained soil, and avoiding fields that have had the disease in the past five years." Complementary crops, especially pumpkins and squash, are also especially susceptible to this disease.

Although total disease control is not yet an option, cultural practices can help prevent widespread damage. These and other techniques will be addressed at the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Conference held in conjunction with the Ohio Roadside Marketing Conference, Feb. 5-8 at the Toledo Seagate Center. Miller will be speaking on Integrated Pest Management Essentials and bacterial spot and speck of tomatoes.

For more information, contact Miller at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, Department of Plant Pathology, 1680 Madison Avenue, Wooster, Ohio 44691. For information about the conference, call Mike Pullins at (614) 249-2424.

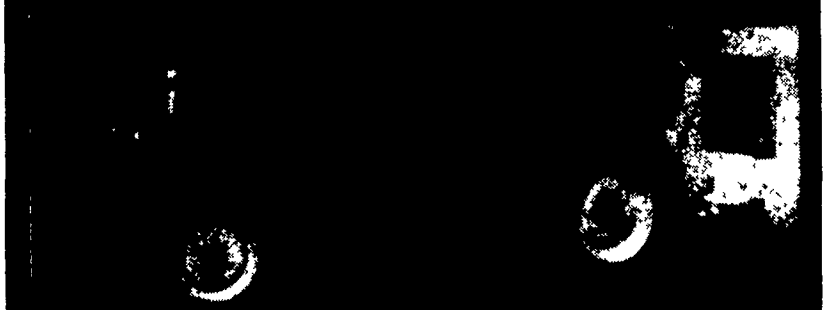
UTILITY SERIES TRACTORS

9011L • 98 HP



BELARUS VALUE. IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

Introducing two big changes in how small jobs get done. The 8011L and 9011L offer a low clearance design and tight turning radius that provide even higher levels of maneuverability. Yet they still manage to offer the same durability, value and affordability you expect from Belarus.

Choose from the 8011L and its tough 81 hp four cylinder water cooled engine or the 9011L's turbo charged 98 hp. Both engines have strong torque characteristics. Add it all up and you've got utility tractors ideal for every type of operation from orchards and vineyards to poultry operations and grounds maintenance.

But the exceptional value doesn't stop there. The 8011L and 9011L offer excellent lift capacity for front end loader applications. Other impressive features include power assisted steering and a fully adjustable seat for operator comfort and convenience.

Combined with their ease of maintenance and servicing, it's not hard to see how Belarus makes even the smallest jobs easier in a big way. That's Belarus value.

In Stock
Hurry In...

The compact size of the L35 with TL720& BT900 allows you to operate efficiently in tight, small areas that are inaccessible to larger TLBs. And, it's easy to move from one job to another. It can be transported with just a 3/4 ton pickup truck and trailer, usually with a regular Class C Driver's License. Operators find the controls "user -friendly," especially useful in rental fleets, and large contractor fleets where operators may go from one piece of equipment to another on a regular basis. The L35 retains the full versatility of a compact with its 3-pt. hitch and PTO for tilling, mowing or box scraper work.
